PRAYER: To set aside the remand order dt.24.02.2026 passed by the Judicial Magistrate Court-II at Ponneri in Cr.No.110 of 2026 on the file of Respondent and pass such further or other orders as this Honble Court.

For Petitioner(s): D.Padmanabhan

For Respondent(s): Mr.A.Amarnath,
Additional Public Prosecutor

O R D E R

This Criminal Original Petition has been filed challenging the order of remand dated 24.02.2026 passed by the learned X Metropolitan Magistrate, Egmore, thereby remanding the petitioners in connection Crime No.110 of 2026.

2. The petitioners are arrayed as A1, A3 & A6 in Crime No.110 of 2026, registered for the offences punishable under Sections 8(c) read with 22(c), 20(b)(ii)(A), 25 and 29(1) of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 (hereinafter referred to as the "NDPS Act"). The allegation against the accused is that they were found in possession of 54 grams of Methamphetamine and 200 grams of Ganja, constituting commercial quantities. Pursuant to the registration of the FIR, all the accused were arrested and remanded to judicial custody. The order of remand is now challenged primarily on the ground that the grounds of arrest were not furnished to the accused.

3. The learned counsel appearing for the petitioners submitted that there is a significant distinction between the expressions "reasons for arrest" and "grounds of arrest". He contended that the reasons for arrest set out in the arrest memos are merely formal and generic in nature, such as preventing the accused from committing any further offence, ensuring proper investigation, preventing the disappearance or tampering of evidence, and preventing the arrested persons from inducing, threatening or promising any person acquainted with the facts of the case so as to dissuade such person from disclosing those facts to the Court or the investigating officer. He therefore submitted that merely recording such reasons in the arrest memos would not amount to communicating the specific grounds of arrest to the petitioners.

3.1. The learned counsel further submitted that the grounds of arrest must contain the specific facts and particulars available with the investigating officer that necessitated the arrest of the accused. Such grounds must be communicated to the arrested person in writing, setting out the basic facts forming the basis of the arrest, so as to afford him a meaningful opportunity to defend himself against custodial remand and to seek bail. In the present case, though the petitioners were served with the arrest memos, the same did not contain the specific grounds of arrest.

Therefore, the learned counsel contended that the arrest of the petitioners and their consequential remand were in violation of Article 22(1) of the Constitution of India and Section 47(1) of the Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita, 2023. In support of his contention, he placed reliance upon the judgment of the Hon'ble Supreme Court in Prabir Purkayastha v. State (NCT of Delhi), reported in 2024 INSC 414, wherein the Hon'ble Supreme Court held that failure to furnish the grounds of arrest in writing would vitiate the arrest as well as the consequential remand order. The learned counsel further submitted that the order of remand was challenged by the co-accused (A5). This Court by order dated 12.11.2026 in Crl.O.P. No. 31179 of 2026 set aside the remand order and hence, sought for allowing this petition.

4. Per contra, the learned Additional Public Prosecutor appearing for the respondent submitted that all the petitioners were found in conscious possession of the contraband and were not arrested merely on the basis of the confession statement of a co-accused. Therefore, they had full knowledge of the circumstances that led to their arrest. According to the learned Additional Public Prosecutor, at the time of their arrest, the petitioners were orally informed of the reasons for their arrest and were aware of the allegations against them.

4.1. He further contended that the requirement of specifically communicating the grounds of arrest assumes significance in cases where the arrest is based on the confession statement of a co-accused, whereas, in the present case, the petitioners were apprehended in conscious possession of the contraband. He further submitted that the remand report would demonstrate that the reasons and grounds for arrest had been duly communicated to the petitioners and that they were aware of the circumstances in which they were arrested and remanded to judicial custody.

4.2. In support of his submissions, the learned Additional Public Prosecutor relied upon the judgment dated 23.01.2026 passed by the High Court of Delhi in Karan Singh v. State (NCT of Delhi), in W.P. (Crl.) No.4203 of 2025. In the said judgment, upon relying on the decisions of the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India, the Delhi High Court observed that the alleged procedural lapse had been raised belatedly, i.e., after more than one year and nine months from the date of arrest, and that no prejudice had been shown to have been caused to the accused, who had been represented by counsel from the very beginning.

4.3. The learned Additional Additional Prosecutor also relied upon the judgment of the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India in State of Karnataka v. Sri Darshan, reported in 2025 SCC OnLine SC 1702, wherein it was held that, while compliance with Section 50 of the Cr.P.C is mandatory, the consistent judicial approach has been to apply a prejudice-oriented test while examining alleged procedural lapses. It was further observed that the mere absence of written grounds of arrest does not ipso facto render the arrest illegal, unless such omission results in demonstrable prejudice by denying the accused a fair opportunity to defend himself.

4.4. He further submitted, in the present case the petitioners had failed to demonstrate the prejudice caused to them by the alleged failure to furnish the reasons and grounds of arrest in writing. He further contended that, since the petitioners were allegedly found in conscious possession of the contraband, they were fully aware of the circumstances that led to their arrest and remand to judicial custody. On these grounds, the learned Additional Public Prosecutor sought dismissal of the Criminal Original Petition.

5. Heard the learned counsel appearing on either side and perused the materials placed before this Court.

6. On perusal of the records, it is evident that the sole ground raised by the petitioners in the present petition is that the specific grounds of arrest were not furnished to them at the time of their arrest, thereby rendering the order of remand violative of the constitutional safeguards guaranteed under Article 22(1) of the Constitution of India. The records reveal that the petitioners were served with arrest memos stating that they had been arrested for the illegal possession of contraband substances, which constituted the basis for their arrest under the NDPS Act. The said information was also communicated to their respective relatives.

7. As rightly pointed out by the learned counsel appearing for the petitioners, there is a significant distinction between the expressions "reasons for arrest" and "grounds of arrest". The reasons for arrest, as recorded in the arrest memos, are merely formal and generic in nature, such as preventing the accused from committing any further offence; ensuring proper investigation of the offence; preventing the disappearance of or tampering with evidence; and preventing the arrested person from making any inducement, threat or promise to any person acquainted with the facts of the case, so as to dissuade such person from disclosing those facts to the Court or the investigating officer. These general reasons are distinct from the specific grounds of arrest, which must disclose the factual basis necessitating the arrest of the accused.

8. These reasons are commonly applicable to any person arrested on a criminal charge. In contrast, the "grounds of arrest" must contain the specific facts and particulars available with the investigating officer that necessitated the arrest of the accused. The grounds of arrest, when communicated in writing, must convey to the arrested person the basic facts forming the basis of the arrest, thereby enabling him to effectively oppose custodial remand and seek bail. Thus, the "grounds of arrest" are necessarily specific to the individual accused and cannot be equated with the "reasons for arrest", which are general in nature.

9. At the same time, the communication of the fact of arrest is entirely distinct from furnishing the grounds of arrest and serving the arrest memo. An arrest memo ordinarily contains the names and addresses of the petitioners, particulars of the FIR and the provisions of law invoked, the place, date and time of arrest, the name of the arresting officer, and the name, address and telephone number of the person to whom the information regarding the arrest has been conveyed. These particulars are merely procedural details pertaining to the arrest and do not, by themselves, disclose the specific grounds on which the arrest has been effected or the reasons necessitating such arrest. Therefore, mere communication of the fact of arrest or service of the arrest memo cannot be construed as compliance with the constitutional requirement of furnishing the grounds of arrest to the accused. Failure to furnish such grounds would amount to a violation of the fundamental right guaranteed under Article 22(1) of the Constitution of India.

10. In the case on hand, the petitioners were served only with the arrest memos, which merely conveyed the particulars of their arrest. Therefore, mere communication of the fact of arrest would not amount to furnishing the specific grounds of arrest. The failure to communicate the grounds of arrest in writing to the petitioners at the time of arrest or immediately thereafter would vitiate the arrest and the subsequent remand, as held by the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India in Prabir Purkayastha vs. State (NCT of Delhi), reported in 2024 INSC 414. The aforesaid legal position was subsequently reaffirmed by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in Vihaan Kumar vs. State of Haryana, reported in 2025 INSC 162, wherein it reiterated that furnishing the arrest memo or communicating the fact of arrest would not satisfy the constitutional mandate under Article 22(1). The same principle was further reiterated in Mihir Rajesh Shah vs. State of Maharashtra and Another, reported in 2025 INSC 1288*,* wherein the Hon'ble Supreme Court emphasised that the grounds of arrest must be communicated in writing to the arrestee in a language understood by him and that non-compliance with this requirement would render the arrest and the consequential remand illegal.

11. On perusal of the arrest memos, it is evident that they have been prepared in a template format and contain a statement to the effect that the arresting officer had explained the grounds of arrest to the accused before their arrest. Admittedly, the grounds of arrest were not furnished to the petitioners in writing. Therefore, the mere assertion that the grounds of arrest were orally explained to the accused cannot, by itself, establish compliance with the guidelines issued by the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India. In view of the failure to furnish the grounds of arrest in writing, the impugned order of remand cannot be sustained and is liable to be set aside.

12. Accordingly, the order of remand dated 24.02.2026 passed by the learned X Metropolitan Magistrate, Egmore, in connection Crime
