In NDPS cases, when the mobile phones and bikes are recovered from the accused, and the case is being prosecuted, and when the accused are using bikes and mobile phones, which were purchased in different names, and when the same are seized and trial has progressed, there is no claim from any third party. Only after the final judgment is delivered, and the Court passes orders directing destroyal of these objects, thereafter these applications are being filed claiming ownership for the mobile phones, bikes etc., used by the accused.
