Order

6/08/2015

1. Heard.
2. This is a petition under Section 482 of Cr.P.C. whereby order dated 22/01/2015 is under challenge. By such order the order passed by the JMFC, Pithoura in Criminal Case No. 340/2014 in between State Vs. Praveen Kumar Sahu and others dated 2/12/2014 has been affirmed which was a rejection of bail under Section 437 (6) of Cr.P.C.
3. Brief facts of this case are that the allegations were leveled that in Paddy Purchase Centre at Kauhakuda and District Cooperative Bank, Pithoura employees and officers of society had entered false data entry by showing sanction of loan and fabricated cheques were prepared. Thereafter, a report was made by the Nodal Officer Cooperative Bank, Mahasamund and cases under Sections 409, 420, 467, 468, 471 and 34 of IPC were registered. Thereafter, the petitioner was arrested on 27/04/2014 and on 25/07/2014 the charge sheet was filed before the JMFC. The charges were framed in the case on 12/09/2014 under Sections 420 read with 34, 409, 467, 468 and 471 of IPC and Section 66 of IT Act and thereafter case was fixed for evidence on 27/09/2014 for the first time. Since the trial was not completed, thereafter an application under Section 437 (6) of Cr.P.C. was filed and prayer was made for release of petitioner on bail. The said application was rejected by the order dated 2/12/2014. Thereafter, revision was preferred wherein the impugned order was passed which is under challenge.

4. Learned counsel for the petitioner would submit that case was fixed for evidence for the first time on 27/09/2014 and thereafter sixty days have passed but no evidence could be recorded. Consequently, by the mandatory provisions of Section 437 (6) of Cr.P.C. petitioner is entitled for bail.

5. Learned State counsel opposes the same and would submit that prosecution was not negligent on its part to adduce evidence and the efforts were continuously made to procure the witnesses and further considering the nature of gravity of offence, petitioner is not entitled for bail.

6. I have heard learned counsel for the parties and perused the documents placed.

7. This fact is not in dispute that case was initially fixed for evidence on 27/09/2014 by an order dated 12/09/2014. On 27/09/2014 evidence was not recorded it shows that witnesses were absent and thereafter case was fixed for 1/10/2014 for evidence. On 1/10/2014 also it appears no witnesses were present and the case was fixed for 13/10/2014. On 13/10/2014 no witnesses were present, the case was fixed for 20/10/2014. Thereafter, the case was fixed from time to time but witnesses were not present.

8. Section 437 of the Cr.P.C. envisages 'that bail may be taken, in case of non-bailable offence. Apart from other grounds, sub-section (6) of Section 437 of the Cr.P.C. envisages that "if, in any case triable by a Magistrate, the trial of a person accused of any non-bailable offence is not concluded within a period of sixty days from the first date fixed for taking evidence in the case, such person shall, if he is in custody during the whole of the said period, be released on bail to the satisfaction of the Magistrate, unless for reasons to be recorded in writing, the Magistrate otherwise directs." The above provision intends to expedite the trial without unnecessarily detaining a person as an under trial prisoner. The same applies only to a case triable by a Magistrate and the underlying intention behind the above provision of sub-section (6) is that a criminal trial should be concluded within sixty days from the first date fixed for taking evidence and if it is not possible to conclude the case within that time, the accused, if in custody, shall be released on bail unless the Magistrate for reasons to be recorded otherwise directs. Similar provisions has been made in the Code of Criminal Procedure for the investigation stage.

9. In the case of Atul Bagga versus State of Chhattisgarh, 2010 Cr.L.J.508, this Court considered the scope, extent and object of provisions contained in Section 437 (6) of the Code and held:-

10. -----

"Sub-section(6) of Section 437 of the Code carves out an exception to the provision contained in clause(i) of sub-section (1) of Section 437 of the Code and reads as follows:

“437. When bail may be taken in case of non-bailable offence.—

xxxxxx

(6) If, in any case triable by a Magistrate, the trial of a person accused of any non-bailable offence is not concluded within a period of sixty days from the first date fixed for taking evidence in the case, such person shall, if he is in custody during the whole of the said period, be released on bail to the satisfaction of the Magistrate, unless for reasons to be recorded in writing, the Magistrate otherwise directs.

It would, thus, appear that under the first limb of sub-section (6) of Section 437 of the Code where the trial of a person accused of any non-bailable offence is not concluded within a period of 60 days from the first date fixed for taking evidence in the case, the law mandates that such person shall, if he is in custody during the whole of the said period, be released on bail to the satisfaction of the Magistrate. The second limb of sub-section (6) of Section 437 of the code carves out an exception and empowers the Magistrate to refuse bail for reasons to be recorded in writing. It is, therefore, open to a Magistrate to refuse bail under sub-section (6) of Section 437 of the Code where the Magistrate assigns reasons in writing which are amenable to scrutiny by a superior Court for examining whether the Magistrate was justified for reasons recorded by him in writing in refusing bail under sub-section(6) of Section 437 of the code. If the reasons assigned by the Magistrate justify refusal of bail and cannot be termed arbitrary then the order refusing bail by the Magistrate under sub-section (6) of Section 437 of the Code would be in accordance with law and not open to interference in revision.

“11. The question that arises for determination is as to what factors should weigh with the Magistrate while refusing grant of bail under sub-section (6) of Section 437 of the Code. In my considered opinion, apart from the gravity of offence and the quantum of punishment, one or more of the following factors, among others may weigh with the Magistrate while refusing bail:

- (a) the overall impact of the offence and the release of the person accused of such offence on the society,
- (b) the possibility of tampering of evidence by the accused,
- (c) the possibility of the accused absconding if released on bail, and lastly,

- (d) the delay in conclusion of the trial within a period of 60 days if attributable to the accused.”

10. In the case of Riza Abdul Razak Zunzunia vs. State of Gujarat, 2009 Cr.L.J. 4766, similar view has been taken in following words by observing as below:-

“21. The question that arises for determination is as to what would be the considerations which would weigh with the Magistrate while deciding an application under Section 437(6) of the Code. Whether the reasons for not releasing an accused on bail would be similar to the reasons for not granting regular bail or whether some special circumstances should exist for the purpose of declining grant of bail under Section 437(6) of the Code? On behalf of the Bank it has been contended that factors like existence of a prima facie case, gravity of the offence and the likelihood of conviction which give rise to a belief that the accused is not likely to remain present at the time of the trial are required to be taken into consideration, whereas on behalf of the applicant it has been contended that such factors are not germane while deciding an application under Section 437(6) of the Code. On a plain reading of the provision as well as considering the object behind enacting the said provision if the contention advanced on behalf of the Bank viz. the prima facie case, gravity of offence, involvement of the accused, etc. are the factors which are to be taken into consideration while deciding the application under Section 437(6) of the Code, were to be accepted, the same would render the said provision nugatory, inasmuch as if the same reasons for which the application for regular bail is refused, are to be considered while deciding the application under Section 437(6) of the Code, there would be no necessity for making such a provision. The application under Section 437(6) of the Code would stand rejected merely on the ground that the application for regular bail had been rejected. In the opinion of this Court, the factors which should be kept in mind while considering an application under Section 437(6) would be different from the factors that are to be taken into consideration while deciding an application for regular bail. Though it may not be possible to lay down any exhaustive list of such factors which may be taken into consideration while deciding the application under Section 437(6) of the Code, some relevant factors would be whether the trial has been delayed on account of the default on the part of the applicant; whether the accused has at any stage during the course of investigation or as an under trial prisoner been absconding; if having regard to the facts of the case there is every likelihood of his jumping bail; or if there are special circumstances due to which it may be deemed expedient not to exercise powers under Section 437(6) etc. But bail cannot be refused for reasons which are generally invoked for refusing bail. The following observations made by the Apex Court in Aslam Babalal Desai v. State of Maharashtra, (1992) 4 SCC 272: (1992 Cr.L.J.3712) in the context of compulsive bail under the proviso to Section 167(2) are apt even in the context of Section 437(6) of the Code: “15. Even where two views are possible, this being a matter belonging to the field of criminal justice involving the liberty of an individual, the provision must be construed strictly in favour of individual liberty since even the law expects early completion of the investigation. The delay in completion of the investigation can be on pain of the accused being released on bail. The prosecution cannot be allowed to trifle with individual liberty if it does not take its task seriously or does not complete it within the time allowed by law.

22. Drawing an analogy, it is can be safely stated that law expects early conclusion of cases triable by Magistrate. The delay in completion of trial in such cases, must therefore, be at the pain of the accused being released on bail, except where the Magistrate by reasons recorded in writing otherwise direct. The said provision therefore, has to be construed strictly in favour of individual liberty. Importing the grounds relevant for the purpose of granting regular bail, for the purpose of deciding an application for bail under Section 437(6) of the Code would not only amount to doing violence to the statute but would defeat the very object of introducing such a provision and reduced it to a mere dead letter. The prosecution, therefore, cannot be permitted to trifle with individual liberty if it does not diligently pursue the proceedings before the Magistrate to ensure that the trial is concluded within the period prescribed under Section 437(6) of the Code.”

11. In the light of the aforesaid provision, if the facts are taken in to account, it is apparent that other co-accused have been released on bail and the present petitioner is in jail since 27/04/2014 and the trial was fixed for evidence on 27/09/2014 and yet not concluded. Taking into account that the delay is not attributed because of the petitioner and the other co-accused have been enlarged on bail, in the opinion of this Court, the petitioner is also entitled for the bail.

12. In view of above, the petitioner is entitled to be released on bail under Section 437(6) of Cr.P.C. The impugned order dated 22/01/2015 passed by the trial Court is set aside and the petitioner shall be released on bail on his furnishing personal bond of Rs.25,000/- with one local surety of the like amount to the satisfaction of the trial Court. He shall appear before the trial Court on each and every date of hearing, unless exempted.

13. Accordingly, the petition is allowed.
