K. KANNAN J. (ORAL)

1. There is no justification for the defendant to file a revision against the order which has merely recorded the fact that the defendant is closing his evidence and posted the case for arguments. The defendant is at liberty to file an application for reopening the case if he has some documents to file. He cannot file a revision against an order passed on an admission made that he was closing the side.
2. The revision petition is dismissed but with above liberty to approach the trial Court for appropriate orders.
