MEHINDER SINGH SULLAR, J. (ORAL)

The matrix of the facts and material, which needs a necessary mention for the limited purpose of deciding the core controversy, involved in the instant petition and emanating from the record, is that initially, in the wake of complaint of complainant Sheetu Chawala, daughter of Surinder Kumar Nanda, respondent No. 2 (for brevity “the complainant”), a criminal case was registered against the petitioners-accused Varun Chawala (husband) son of Surinder Chawala and others, vide FIR No. 335 dated 20.07.2012 (Anneuxre P-1) on accusation of having committed the offence punishable under Sections 406/498-A/506, IPC, by the police of Police Station Yamuna Nagar.

2. During the course of investigation of the criminal case, good sense prevailed and the parties have amicably settled their matrimonial disputes by means of compromise/affidavits dated 16.05.2014 of petitioner No. 1, Varun Chawala (Annexure P-2) and the complainant Sheetu Chawala (Annexure P-3).

3. Having compromised the matter, the petitioners-accused have preferred the present petition, to quash the impugned FIR (Annexure P-1) and all other subsequent proceedings arising therefrom, invoking the provisions of Section 482 Cr.PC, inter-alia, pleading that now with the intervention of respectable, the parties have amicably settled their matrimonial disputes, by way of pointed compromise/affidavits (Annexures P-2 and P3). They have redressed their grievances. The complainant is now happily residing with her husband (petitioner No. 1) in her matrimonial home. She has no objection if a criminal case registered against the petitioners-accused by virtue of impugned FIR (Annexure P-1) is quashed. On the strength of aforesaid grounds, petitioners sought to quash the impugned FIR (Annexure P1) and all other consequent proceedings arising thereto in the manner depicted here-in-above.

4. During the course of preliminary hearing, the Magistrate having the jurisdiction was directed to record the statements of all the concerned parties, with regard to the genuineness and validity or otherwise of the compromise/affidavit (Annexure P-3), by means of order dated 11.11.2014, by this Court.

5. In compliance thereof, the concerned Magistrate, having recorded the statements of all the concerned parties, has reported, vide his report dated 26.11.2014, that the parties have amicably settled their matrimonial dispute. The complainant is happily residing with petitioner No. 1 in her matrimonial home. The settlement arrived at between the parties is valid and genuine.

6. Meaning thereby, it stands proved on record that the parties have amicably settled their matrimonial disputes, by means of compromise/affidavit (Annexures P-3). The factum of compromise is also reiterated by the complainant in her affidavit dated 16.05.2014 (Annexure P-3) and the pointed report of the Magistrate.

7. What cannot possibly be disputed here is that, the law with regard to the settlement of matrimonial disputes, by virtue of amicable settlement between the parties is no more res integra and is now well settled.

8. An identical question came to be decided by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in case Gian Singh Versus State of Punjab and another, 2012 (4) RCR (Criminal) 543. Having interpreted the relevant provisions and considered a line of the judgments on the indicated points, it was ruled (para 57) as under:-

“57. The position that emerges from the above discussion can be summarised thus: the power of the High Court in quashing a criminal proceeding or FIR or complaint in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction is distinct and different from the power given to a criminal court for compounding the offences under Section 320 of the Code. Inherent power is of wide plenitude with no statutory limitation but it has to be exercised in accord with the guideline engrafted in such power viz; (i) to secure the ends of justice or (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of any Court. In what cases power to quash the criminal proceeding or complaint or

F.I.R. may be exercised where the offender and victim have settled their dispute would depend on the facts and circumstances of each case and no category can be prescribed. However, before exercise of such power, the High Court must have due regard to the nature and gravity of the crime. Heinous and serious offences of mental depravity or offences like murder, rape, dacoity, etc. cannot be fittingly quashed even though the victim or victim's family and the offender have settled the dispute. Such offences are not private in nature and have serious impact on society. Similarly, any compromise between the victim and offender in relation to the offences under special statutes like Prevention of Corruption Act or the offences committed by public servants while working in that capacity etc., cannot provide for any basis for quashing criminal proceedings involving such offences. But the criminal cases having overwhelmingly and pre-dominatingly civil flavour stand on different footing for the purposes of quashing, particularly the offences arising from commercial, financial, mercantile, civil, partnership or such like transactions or the offences arising out of matrimony relating to dowry etc. or the family disputes where the wrong is basically private or personnel in nature and the parties have resolved their entire dispute. In this category of cases, High Court may quash criminal proceedings if in its view, because of the compromise between the offender and victim, the possibility of conviction is remote and bleak and continuation of criminal case would put accused to great oppression and prejudice and extreme injustice would be caused to him by not quashing the criminal case despite full and complete settlement and compromise with the victim. In other words, the High Court must consider whether it would be unfair or contrary to the interest of justice to continue with the criminal proceeding or continuation of the criminal proceeding would tantamount to abuse of process of law despite settlement and compromise between the victim and wrongdoer and whether to secure the ends of justice, it is appropriate that criminal case is put to an end and if the answer to the above question(s) is in affirmative, the High Court shall be well within its jurisdiction to quash the criminal proceeding.”

9. Sequelly, the same view was again reiterated by the Hon'ble Apex Court in case Narinder Singh & others v. State of Punjab & Anr. 2014 (2) RCR (Criminal) 482.

10. Such thus being the legal position and the material on record, now the short & significant question, though important, that arises for determination in this petition is, as to whether the present criminal prosecution against the petitioners deserves to be quashed in view of the compromise or not?

11. Having regard to the contentions of the learned counsel, to my mind, it would be in the interest and justice would be sub-served, if the parties are allowed to compromise their matrimonial dispute. Moreover, the learned counsel are ad idem that, in view of the settlement of disputes between the parties, the instant petition deserves to be accepted in this respect.

12. As is evident from the record that, now with the intervention of respectable, the parties have amicably settled their disputes, vide pointed compromise/affidavits (Annexures P2 and P-3). The complainant has reiterated the factum of compromise in her affidavit (Annexure P3). The parties have redressed their grievances. The complainant is now happily residing with her husband (petitioner No. 1) in her matrimonial home. The settlement is stated to be in welfare, benefit and larger interest of the parties. The complainant has no objection in case, the criminal case registered against the petitioners, by virtue of impugned FIR is quashed. The factum and genuineness of the compromise between them is also reiterated by the Magistrate in his indicated report.

13. Therefore, it would be seen that since, the compromise is in the welfare and interest of the parties, so, there is no impediment in translating their wishes into reality and to quash the criminal prosecution to set the matter at rest, to enable them to live in peace and to enjoy the life and liberty in a dignified manner. Thus, to me, the ratio of the law laid down and the bench-mark set out by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in cases of Gian Singh & Narinder Singh & Ors. (supra), “mutatis mutandis” is applicable to the facts of the present case and is the complete answer to the problem in hand. Therefore, the impugned FIR and all other subsequent proceedings arising therefrom, deserve to be quashed in the obtaining circumstances of the case.

14. In the light of the aforesaid reasons, the instant petition is accepted. Consequently, the impugned FIR No. 335 dated 20.07.2012 (Annexure P-1) and all other consequent proceedings arising thereto, are hereby quashed. The petitioners-accused are accordingly discharged from the indicated criminal case on the basis of compromise, subject to all just exceptions.
