RAMESHWAR SINGH MALIK, J. (Oral)

Feeling aggrieved against the impugned judgment dated 8.9.2012 passed by learned Additional Sessions Judge, Ambala, whereby appeal of the petitioner was dismissed, upholding the impugned judgment of acquittal dated 24.2.2010 passed by the learned Sub Divisional Judicial Magistrate, Naraingarh, complainant has approached this Court by way of instant criminal revision petition.

Brief facts of the case, as recorded by the learned trial Court in para 1 of its impugned judgment, are that the complaint under Section 494 of the Indian Penal Code ('IPC' for short) was filed by the complainant (petitioner herein) to the effect that her marriage took place with the accused (respondent herein) on 26.4.1994 at village Tandwal (Banondi), Tehsil Naraingarh, District Ambala, as per Hindu Rites and Ceremonies. They lived like husband and wife for a long time and no child was born out of this wedlock. The behaviour of the accused-respondent and his parents with the complainant-petitioner was very cruel from the very beginning. However, the accused-respondent was not treating the complainant properly and an application under Section 125 of the Code of Criminal Procedure ('Cr.P.C.' for short) for maintenance was filed. In between complainant-petitioner was informed through her maternal uncle by one Raj Kumar that Sant Kumar had again married with one Kumari Beena Devi, daughter of Parkash Chand on 5.5.1998. It was further alleged that subsequent marriage was performed during the existence of first marriage and all the necessary ceremonies having taken place. Therefore, accused-respondent was liable to be punished under Section 494 IPC.

After considering the preliminary evidence led by the complainant, the learned trial Court summoned the accused to face criminal trial for the offences under Section 494 IPC. In the pre-charge evidence, complainant produced as many as seven witnesses, besides producing other documentary evidence. Charge was framed. After closing the evidence by the complainant, statement of the accused was recorded under Section 313 Cr.P.C. The accused denied all the allegations, pleaded false implication and claimed complete innocence. He also examined one defence witness, besides producing other documentary evidence.

After hearing the learned counsel for the parties and going through the evidence brought on record, the learned trial Court came to the conclusion that the complainant failed to bring home the guilt against the accused. Accordingly, the complaint was dismissed and accused was acquitted of the charge framed against him, vide impugned judgment of acquittal dated 24.2.2010.

Dissatisfied, the impugned judgment of acquittal was challenged by the complainant, by way of appeal which also came to be dismissed by learned Additional Sessions Judge, vide impugned judgment dated 8.9.2012. Hence this criminal revision petition, at the hands of complainant.

Learned counsel for the petitioner submits that the complainant brought cogent and convincing evidence on record, which was sufficient to record conviction of the accused-respondent. However, since the learned Courts have failed to appreciate the evidence in correct perspective, the impugned judgments have resulted in miscarriage of justice. She prays for setting aside the impugned judgments, by allowing the present criminal petition.

Having heard the learned counsel for the petitioner, after careful perusal of the record of the case and giving thoughtful consideration to the contentions raised, this Court is of the considered opinion that keeping in view the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case, noticed hereinabove, instant one has not been found to be a fit case, warranting interference at the hands of this Court, while exercising its revisional jurisdiction, which itself is a limited one. To say so, reasons are more than one, which are being recorded hereinafter.

A bare combined reading of both the impugned judgments would show that the learned Courts have discussed, considered and appreciated each and every relevant aspect of the matter, before arriving at their judicious conclusions. Oral as well as documentary evidence was appreciated in the correct perspective. Having said that, this Court feels no hesitation to conclude that the learned Courts have committed no error of law, while passing their respective impugned judgments of acquittal and the same deserve to be upheld.

It is the settled principle of law that wherever two views are possible, the view which goes in favour of the acquittal, deserves to be adopted by the Courts. It is not even the argued case on behalf of the petitioner that the view taken by the learned trial Court as well as by the learned Additional Sessions Judge was not one of the possible views. In this view of the matter, it can be safely concluded that the impugned judgments of acquittal do not suffer from any illegality and the same deserve to be upheld, for this reason also.

The view taken by this Court also finds support from the judgment of the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Arulvelu & anr. vs. State represented by the Public Prosecutor and anr. 2009(4) RCR (Crl.) 638. The relevant observations made by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in para Nos.39, 40 and 41 in the case of Arulvelu (supra) read as under:

“In Ghurey Lal v. State of Uttar Pradesh (2008) 10 SCC 450, a two Judge Bench of this Court of which one of us (Bhandari, J.) was a member had an occasion to deal with most of the cases referred in this judgment. This Court provided guidelines for the Appellate Court in dealing with the cases in which the trial courts have acquitted the accused. The following principles emerge from the cases above:

- 1. The accused is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty. The accused possessed this presumption when he* was before the trial court. The trial court's acquittal bolsters the presumption that he is innocent.

2. The power of reviewing evidence is wide and the appellate court can re-appreciate the entire evidence on record. It can review the trial court's conclusion with respect to both facts and law, but the Appellate Court must give due weight and consideration to the decision of the trial court.

3. The appellate court should always keep in mind that the trial court had the distinct advantage of watching the demeanour of the witnesses. The trial court is in a better position to evaluate the credibility of the witnesses.

4. The appellate court may only overrule or otherwise disturb the trial court's acquittal if it has "very substantial and compelling reasons" for doing so.

5. If two reasonable or possible views can be reached - one that leads to acquittal, the other to conviction - the High Courts/appellate courts must rule in favour of the accused.

40. This Court in a recently delivered judgment State of Rajasthan v. Naresh @ Ram Naresh 2009 (11) SCALE 699 again examined judgments of this Court and laid down that "An order of acquittal should not be lightly interfered with even if the court believes that there is some evidence pointing out the finger towards the accused. This Court has dealt with the scope of interference with an order of acquittal in a number of cases."

41. Careful scrutiny of all these judgments lead to the definite conclusion that the appellate court should be very slow in setting aside a judgment of acquittal particularly in a case where two views are possible. The trial court judgment can not be set aside because the appellate court's view is more probable. The appellate court would not be justified in setting aside the trial court judgment unless it arrives at a clear finding on marshalling the entire evidence on record that the judgment of the trial court is either perverse or wholly unsustainable in law."

The law laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in Arulevlu's case (supra) has also been followed by a Division Bench of this Court in the case of State of Haryana v. Aman Kumar and another 2012 (3) RCR (Crl.) 330 and in the judgment dated 2.11.2012 passed by this Court in CRM-A- 284-MA-2011 (Baljeet Singh v. State of Punjab and others).

Reverting back to the facts of the present case and respectfully following the law laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in Arulvelu's case (supra), it is unhesitatingly held that the learned Courts were well-justified on facts as well as in law, for passing the impugned judgments of acquittal and the same deserve to be upheld, for this reason as well.

No other argument was raised.

Considering the peculiar facts and circumstances of the case noted above, coupled with the reasons aforementioned, this Court is of the considered view that the present petition is misconceived, bereft of merit and without any substance, thus, it must fail. No case for interference has been made out.

Resultantly, with the abovesaid observations made, instant criminal revision petition stands dismissed, however, with no order as to costs.
