 Respondent/s

For the Appellant/s : Mr. Rajesh Kumar Verma, Adv.
For the Respondent/s : Mr.

6. 22-02-2016 Heard learned counsel for the appellant.

The suit is of the year 2010. Instant petition happens to be of the year 2011 and during midst thereof, there happens to be no complaint at the end of the appellant/plaintiff with regard to any kind of change having brought up or attempted relating to the properties under lis.

It is needless to say that order of injunction is to be passed only to preserve the properties. However, being the suit of the year 2010, having appearance of all the parties and further, having the prayer made on mere apprehension at the hands of respondent without being duly substantiated therefore, the learned lower Court is directed to take up the suit on priority basis and will conclude the same within six months without giving any undue advantage to any of the parties by way of an adjournment.

In case the circumstances so necessitate, any party may move before the learned lower Court to preserve the property till conclusion of suit.

With the aforesaid observation, the instant petition is disposed of.
