On 16.11.2012 the Court had noticed that the impugned order in the writ petition was also the subject matter of CWP-21598-2012 which stood dismissed on 01.11.2012. This order was passed in the presence of the parties but the matter was adjourned to await the outcome of LPA which had been preferred against the impugned order in CWP-21598-2012 which was the same as one impugned in the present writ petition.

Be that as it may, the Court would have no option but to follow suit and dispose off the present writ petition in terms of CWP-21598-2012. The matter pertains to partition and status quo order if granted in LPA would naturally demand the protection of possession which if granted in one case would be valid for the other cases since the same order is under challenge.

The writ petition is, therefore, dismissed in terms of CWP-21598-2012.
