C A V Order

Reserved on : 27.04.2017

Delivered on : 16.05.2017

Per P. Sam Koshy, J.

1. This bunch of Writ Petitions, except for Writ Petition (S) No. 2279 of 2016, Writ Petition (S) No. 2264 of 2016, Writ Petition (S) No. 2451 of 2016 and Writ Petitions (S) No. 4816 of 2016, has been placed before the Division Bench by the learned Single Bench vide its order dated 5.10.2015 passed in Writ Petition (S) No. 4903 of 2014 and other analogous petitions and have been referred to be considered and decided by a larger Bench in view of the matter assuming general importance.

2. The reason to send these matters to the Division Bench also was on account of the fact that the different Single Benches of this High Court have taken a view that once the order of retrenchment/discontinuance of employment is set aside by the Labour Court and the workman is reinstated in employment it has to be presumed that he stood in continuous employment. In other words, the period during which the workman was out of employment by virtue of an illegal termination order would also have to be counted for the purpose of calculating the total length of service. This view according to the learned Single Bench referring the matter to the larger Bench was perhaps contrary to the view laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the landmark judgment of Secretary, State of Karnataka and Others v. Umadevi and Others, 2006 (4) SCC 1, as also in the case of Hindustan Aeronautics Limited v. Dan Bahadur Singh & Others, 2007 (6) SCC 207.

3. The four Writ Petitions which have been referred to in paragraph 1 herein above are those which are not referred by the learned Single Bench in its order dated 5.10.2015, but are matters which have been separately ordered by the learned Single Bench to be listed along with this bunch of referred matters as the issue involved remains similar.

4. Brief facts relevant for the purpose of adjudicating the issue involved in the present case are that the workers involved in these cases are all employees working in the office of the Respondents, i.e., either in the Forest Department or in the Public Works Department or Water Resources Department; some are in the Irrigation Department and likewise a few are also employees of the Municipal Council. They were all initially appointed as daily wage workers and have worked for a considerable period of time. Services of these workmen stood discontinued on different dates and years. The alleged discontinuance of the respective workmen was challenged before the concerned Labour Court and in each of the cases, the Labour Court has allowed the case in their favour and has granted the relief of reinstatement. By virtue of the order of reinstatement, those workmen are still continuing in services. Details of each of the workers in this bunch of Writ Petitions can be visualized from the chart given below:

5. It is pertinent to mention at this juncture that the award of reinstatement passed in favour of these workmen has in due course of time attained finality wherein except for two of the cases the State has not challenged any of the award of the Labour Court and in the two cases where the State has challenged the award, the petitions of the State have got dismissed so far as challenge to the order of reinstatement is concerned.

6. The State Government had initially taken a policy decision for regularizing all those daily wage employees who have completed 10 years of service as on 31.12.1988. Subsequently, in the light of the judgment of the Umadevi (supra), the State of Chhattisgarh vide its memo dated 5.3.2008 again took a policy decision holding that all those daily wage employees who are in continuous employment from 1.1.1989 to 31.12.1997 shall be considered for regularization. The workmen herein had claimed the relief for grant of regularization in view of the memo of the State Government, dated 5.3.2008. However, the claim of each of the workmen has been rejected on the ground that they did not have 10 years of continuous service as is required. The State Government did not count the period during which these workmen were out of employment on account of alleged retrenchment/discontinuance of service which was ultimately set aside/quashed by the Labour Court.

7. All the workmen before this Court have filed these petitions seeking for a relief that the authorities concerned may be directed to consider the period from the initial date of appointment till the reinstatement was made and the subsequent period as continuous service for the purpose of calculating the length of service. According to the workmen, consequent on the retrenchment order having been set aside, as a natural consequence it has to be presumed that their service would deem to have been continued as if the order of retrenchment/discontinuance did not exist for all practical purposes and therefore the entire period right from the date of initial engagement till the order of reinstatement and the subsequent period has to be treated as in service, without break.

8. The contentions of the learned Counsels for the petitioners-workmen is that undisputedly they had worked as a daily wage employee for a continuous long period of time which was inclusive of continuous 240 days in a calender year and thereafter they were abruptly discontinued and the Labour Court declared the discontinuance to be illegal termination as the compliance of the mandatory provisions under Chapter V of the Industrial Disputes Act was not followed and thus had set aside the termination order. According to the workmen, the effect of the setting aside of the order of illegal termination would relate back to the date of discontinuance and for all practical purposes it should be treated as if the said action of illegal discontinuance never existed. According to the workmen, a void action of discontinuance from service is just void and it would be as if it does not exist at all and if the said action is considered to be void the workmen are entitled for consequential benefits relating back to the date of discontinuance at least to the extent of getting the benefit of continuity of service.

9. Shri Yashwant Singh Thakur, learned Additional Advocate General, opposing the claim of the workmen submitted that the substantive status of the workmen is that of a daily wage worker. That, a daily wage worker does not have an indefeasible right created in his favour as that of a regular employee, to seek the benefit of continuity in service in respect of a case where his services having been discontinued and subsequently reinstated at the interference of the Labour Court. According to learned Additional Advocate General, the reinstatement of the employee has to be treated as a fresh appointment in view of his status being of a daily wage employee. According to him, the spirit of the judgment of the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Umadevi (supra) and the subsequent judgments pronounced in this regard is that, what is primarily to be considered is whether there has been actual working by the respective workers continuously for a period of 10 years on the basis of which his claim for regularization could be made.

10. In support of his contentions, learned Additional Advocate General has relied upon the decisions in the case of Secretary, State of Karnataka and Others v. Umadevi and Others, 2006 (4) SCC 1, as also in the case of Hindustan Aeronautics Limited v. Dan Bahadur Singh & Others, 2007 (6) SCC 207. Based upon the principles laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the aforesaid two judgments, learned Additional Advocate General tries to emphasize and bring the case of the respective workmen within the ambit of 'litigious employment' and who, according to the learned Additional Advocate General, would not be entitled for any relief. Banking upon the aforesaid ratio and principles laid down in the aforesaid two judgments, learned Additional Advocate General submitted that the period during which the workmen had been out of employment because of retrenchment the said period could not be counted for the purpose of counting the length of service, or for that matter, treating the said period as in continuous employment.

11. In view of the aforesaid discussions, the moot questions which have to be adjudicated upon in the present bunch of Writ Petitions are, (i) whether the workmen herein would fall within the category of 'litigious employment', (ii) whether the period during which these workmen were out of service can be treated as being in continuous employment.

12. The Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Dipali Gundu Surwase v. Kranti Junior Adhyapak Mahavidyalaya, 2013 (10) SCC 324, in paragraph 22 has held as under:

“The very idea of restoring an employee to the position which he held before dismissal or removal or termination of service implies that the employee will be put in the same position in which he would have been but for the illegal action taken by the employer”

13. At this juncture, it would also be relevant to refer to the case of Harjinder Singh v. Punjab State Warehousing Corporation, 2010 (3) SCC 192, wherein in paragraph 21 referring to the powers of the High Court under Article 226/227 of the Constitution it was held as under:

“21. Before concluding, we consider it necessary to observe that while exercising jurisdiction under Article 226 and/or 227 of the Constitution in matters like the present one, the High Courts are duty-bound to keep in mind that the Industrial Disputes Act and other similar legislative instruments are social welfare legislations and the same are required to be interpreted keeping in view the goals set out in the Preamble of the Constitution and the provisions contained in Part IV thereof in general and Articles 38, 39(a) to (e), 43 and 43-A in particular, which mandate that the State should secure a social order for the promotion of welfare of the people, ensure equality between men and women and equitable distribution of material resources of the community to subserve the common good and also ensure that the workers get their dues..”

14. Keeping in view the aforesaid two principles of law laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court, if we consider the facts of the present cases it would clearly reflect that in all the cases, there was an order of illegal discontinuance of services of the workers involved, which was questioned before the Court of law, under the Industrial Disputes Act and the Labour Court, in some cases the Industrial Court and in some cases the High Court, has found the illegal discontinuance to be bad in law and has set aside the same. The order of the Labour Court stands complied with. Now the only issue is, whether the period in which the workers have been out of employment should be calculated in continuity of service or not?

15. As per Merriam Webster Dictionary (on-line), the word "reinstate" means to put (someone) back in a job or position that had been taken away to place again in a former position. To restore to a previous effective state. As per the Law Lexicon, 4th Edition, the word "reinstate" means to reinstall; to re-establish; to place again in a former state, condition or office; to restore to a state or position from which the object or person had been removed. The Black's Law Dictionary as well as the Shorter Oxford English Dictionary also give the meaning of "reinstate" as has been defined in the Law Lexicon referred to above.

16. In the matter of Jasmer Singh v. State of Haryana & Another, 2015 (4) SCC 458, in a case where the Industrial Tribunal has set aside the termination order and finding the workers of having worked for more than 240 days in a calender year, the action of the employer to be violative of Section 25-F and ordered for reinstatement with continuity of service and with back wages. The Single Judge of the High Court had set aside the same. The Division Bench had affirmed the order of the Single Judge. However, the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the aforesaid judgment dealing with the previous precedents on the subject held that in the event if the order of discontinuance or termination is held to be bad, the worker would be entitled to be reinstated with continuity of service and full back wages, and in the process had set aside the two orders of the High Court and affirmed the order of the Tribunal granting reinstatement with continuity of service and full back wages.

17. Way back in the year 1979, the three-Judge Bench of the Hon'ble Supreme Court while considering the similar issue in the case of Hindustan Tin Works (P) Ltd. v. Employees, 1979 (2) SCC 80, in paragraph 9 held as follows:

“9. It is no more open to debate that in the field of industrial jurisprudence a declaration can be given that the termination of service is bad and the workman continues to be in service. The spectre of common law doctrine that contract of personal service cannot be specifically enforced or the doctrine of mitigation of damages does not haunt in this branch of law. The relief of reinstatement with continuity of service can be granted where termination of service is found to be invalid. It would mean that the employer has taken away illegally the right to the work of the workman contrary to the relevant law or in breach of contract and simultaneously deprived deprived workman of his earnings.....If the services were not terminated the workmen ordinarily would have continued to work and would have earned their wages. When it was held that the termination of services was neither proper nor justified, it would not only show that the workmen were always willing to serve but if they rendered service they would legitimately be entitled to the wages for the same. If the workmen were always ready to work but they were kept away therefrom on account of invalid act of the employer, there is no justification for not awarding them full back wages which were very legitimately due to them.”

18. In 2002 (9) SCC 492, Gurpreet Singh v. State of Punjab & Others, the three-Judge Bench of Hon'ble Supreme Court while dealing with the issue of continuity of service, in paragraph 3, held as under:

“3. Having heard the learned counsel for the parties and on examining the materials on record, we fail to understand how the continuity of service could be denied once the plaintiff is directed to be reinstated in service on setting aside the order of termination. It is not a case of fresh appointment, but it is a case of reinstatement. That being the position, direction of the High Court that the plaintiff will not get continuity of service cannot be sustained and we set aside that part of the impugned order.”

19. A similar view has also been taken by the Single Bench of this Court in Writ Petition (L) No. 2207 of 2013 wherein while deciding the writ petition it was held that, “In the opinion of this Court when their disengagement/retrenchment has been found vitiated by the Labour Court by its award, the legal effect of the said order would be that the Petitioners were entitled to continue in service, but they were denied engagement by the respondents, therefore such plea that they were not in continuous service is not entertainable”.

20. In the case of State of Jharkhand & Others v. Kamal Prasad & Others, 2014 (7) SCC 223, dealing with the similar issue the Hon’ble Supreme Court in paragraph 14 has held as under:

“14. The Division Bench of the High Court after referring to the case of Secretary, State of Karnataka & Ors. v. Umadevi & Ors., has clearly held that if a person has served for 10 years or more, then it is the duty of the State Government to consider his case for regularization in the post. The said conclusion came to be reached by relying on Articles 309, 14, 16 of the Constitution of India. Relying upon Umadevi & Ors. (supra), the High Court has further referred to the judgment in the State of Karnataka & Ors. v. M.L. Kesari & Ors. which is considered by this Court and this Court has clearly held that the case of Umadevi & Ors. (supra) cast a duty upon the State Government to take steps to regularize the services of those irregularly appointed appointees, who had served for more than 10 years without the benefit or protection of any interim order. Further in the said case, this Court has declared that it has been clearly ordered that one time settlement/measure should be taken within six months i.e. from 10.04.2006. With reference to the aforesaid decision the learned senior counsel appearing on behalf of the respondent-employees placed reliance upon Article 142 of the Constitution in support of the submission that order of the Supreme Court be respected and implemented by its true meaning and spirit. Therefore, the Division Bench of the High Court accepted the same and came to the conclusion that the claims of the respondent-employees for regularization in their posts are fit cases and they became unfortunate only because of the creation of the State of Jharkhand over which the employees had no control and could not have prevented creation of the State of Jharkhand and because of that reason only, one State cannot take a different stand with respect to the employees appointed by same process. The State Government cannot throw the employees jobless after 30 years of their continuous service in public employment guaranteed under Article 16 of the Constitution, which would result in great injustice since their source of income will be taken away and thereby the employees and their families will suffer due to the arbitrary action of the State Government of Jharkhand which deprived a person of life and liberty guaranteed under Articles 19 and 21 of the Constitution of India.”

21. In the landmark decision in the case of Olga Tellis & Others v. Bombay Municipal Corporation & Others, 1985 (3) SCC 545, the Hon'ble Supreme Court in very categorical terms dealing with Article 21 and comparing it with the right to livelihood held that, “The sweep of the right to life conferred by Article 21 is wide and far reaching. An equally important facet of that right is the right to livelihood because, no person can live without the means of living, that is, the means of livelihood. If the right to livelihood is not treated as a part of the constitutional right to live, the easiest way of depriving a person of his right to life would be to deprive him of his means of livelihood. Right to work is the most precious liberty that man possesses. It is most precious liberty because, it sustains and enables a man to live and the right to life thus is a precious freedom. Life means something more than mere animal existence and the inhibition against the deprivation of life extends to all those limits and faculties by which life is enjoyed”.

22. Now if we look into the facts of the present case, undisputedly, by now it has to be accepted that these workmen were initially appointed on different dates as mentioned in the aforementioned chart. Perusal of the said chart would reveal that all the workmen have put in a considerable period of time from the date of their appointment before they were discontinued in service and after the order of the Labour Court which in due course of time has attained finality they have also been reinstated. From the date of reinstatement also till date all the workmen are still working with the Respondents and from the date of reinstatement also they have put in a considerable period of time. All these workers have been slogging with the Respondents with a hope and legitimate expectation of being regularized one day. Based upon the judgment of Umadevi (supra), the State of Chhattisgarh also has issued a circular on 5.3.2008. The object of the said circular also was for considering the persons who had completed more than 10 years of service they should be regularized. The alleged order of termination of service of the daily wage workers was held to be illegal by the Labour Court. The effect of the termination order being set aside would mean that the workmen remained in continuous employment as if the order of discontinuance never existed. All these workmen as on date are all middle aged persons and would not be now in a position for getting a regular employment elsewhere.

23. Considering the fact that the Industrial Disputes Act is a social welfare legislation and the circular dated 5.3.2008 also being the circular of the State Government issued keeping in mind the welfare of the poor workers and has been issued for the promotion and welfare of the people ensuring equality and equity between the workers appointed on daily wage basis and the post against which these persons are discharging so as to subserve the common good that can occur to the workers for the long service rendered by the respective workmen.

24. Once when we reach to the conclusion that the implication of the order of dismissal, removal or termination being set aside it has to be construed as, the workers would be put in the same position at which they were, but for the illegal dismissal, removal or termination order. If this analogy is applied to the facts of the present cases then all the workmen before this Court would squarely fall within the ambit of the category of workers who would be eligible for regularization in terms of the circular dated 5.3.2008.

25. In view of the legal precedents enumerated in the preceding paragraphs and also considering the facts and circumstances of the present cases, this Court is of the opinion that the claim of these workmen for consideration of regularization in terms of the circular dated 5.3.2008 is just, proper and legal.

26. Accordingly, these Writ Petitions are allowed. The question of law discussed earlier to be decided in these petitions is answered in the affirmative in favour of the petitioners-workers holding that they would not fall in the category of litigious worker and that they would be entitled for continuity of service for the period they were out of employment while they were litigating before the Labour Court.

As a consequence, the workers in those cases where the claim has been rejected by the respective Respondents on the ground of there being break in service or the claim of the workers being rejected on the ground of their not serving the Respondents prior to 31.12.1997 are all set aside/quashed. The Respondents are directed to consider the case of these petitioners-workers for regularization in accordance with the circular granting them the advantage of continuity of service from the date of their initial engagement till date.
