CRL. M.A.No.9248 /2017 (Exemption)

Exemption allowed, subject to just exceptions.

Application stands disposed off.

CRL. M.C.No. 2262/2017

By the instant petition filed under Section 482 Cr.PC, FIR no. 43/2014 under Sections 498A/406/34 IPC, P.S. Sagarpur, is sought to be quashed. IO identifies the parties present before the Court.

Subject FIR is the off-shoot of a matrimonial dispute amongst the complainant-respondent no.2 and the petitioners and the parties have arrived at a compromise/settlement. Under the compromise/settlement arrived at and in pursuance thereof, a decree of dissolution of marriage has already come to be passed by the Principal Judge, Family Courts, Patiala House Courts, Delhi on 2.3.2017. It is also jointly stated that but for the subject FIR, all other actions/counter actions amongst the parties have been resolved under the compromise/settlement arrived at. Today, before the Court, a demand draft favouring the complainant-respondent no.2 drawn on Corporation Bank in the sum of Rs.1,50,000/- has also come to be handed over to the complainant-respondent no.2. Complainant- respondent No.2 present before the Court, states that with the receipt of the said payment today, she is left with no other claim(s) of any kind whatsoever, against the petitioners. It is also stated that though, the challan is filed, but, it is yet to be taken up for consideration on charge. Assuming, the charges come to be framed, with the compromise/ settlement arrived at, it is highly improbable that the trial would bear any fruits and the entire exercise in all likelihood would be futile. With the compromise/ settlement arrived at, not only the respective parties would get an opportunity to have better recourse for their lives, it shall bring peace and harmony in their families.
