This petition under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure has been filed for quashing of FIR No.36 dated 19.01.2015 registered under Section 408 and 420,180,120-B(added lateron) of the Indian Penal Code (for short 'the IPC'), at Police Station DLF Qutab Enclave, Sector 29, Gurugram, District Gurugram and all consequential proceedings arising therefrom, on the basis of compromise arrived at between the parties.

Earlier the parties were directed to appear before the Trial Court/Illaq Magistrate for getting their statements recorded qua the compromise arrived at between them. However, the report of the Judicial Magistrate, Ist Class had come pointing out that the parties have not made statement with regard to the final compromise between them. Therefore, the compromise relied at between the parties was not found to be worth acting upon.

On 19th September, 2018, the following Order was passed by this Court:-

Learned counsel for the parties have agreed that the petitioners shall bring an affidavit in support of the respondent/complainant for his 'No Objection' qua the quashing of FIR No.0395 dated 20.08.2014 registered under Sections 420, 468, 471 IPC at Police Station Naraina District South West; so as to enable the complainant to file quashing petition before Hon'ble the Delhi High Court.

Learned counsel for the complainant submits that once this affidavit is given by the petitioner then the complainant shall have 'No Objection' of any kind qua the quashing of the present FIR. Subject to the above affidavit, the parties have unconditionally agreed for quashing of the FIR registered against each other.

Adjourned to 05.10.2018.

Petitioner shall bring an affidavit in favour of complainant for quashing of the above said FIR No.0395 dated 20.08.2014 registered under Sections 420, 468, 471 IPC at Police Station Naraina District South West.

To be shown in the urgent list.”

Pursuant to the above said order, learned counsel for the petitioner has produced a copy of the Affidavit sworn by the petitioner; dated 04.10.2018 for agreeing to the quashing of the FIR No.395 of the year 2014 registered under Sections 420/468/471 IPC at Police Station Naraina, New Delhi. A copy of the same is taken on record as 'Mark A'. Learned counsel for the petitioner submits that original of this Affidavit has been handed over to the learned counsel for the Complainant so that he can apply for quashing of the above said complaint before the Hon'ble Delhi High Court.

Shri Rohan Mittal, Advocate appearing on behalf of the Complainant has admitted the fact that he has received the original affidavit submitted by the petitioner. It is further submitted by the counsel for the Complainant that he has instructions from the complainant to submit before this Court that the Complainant does not have any objection if the present FIR against the petitioner is quashed.

The ultimate aim, objective and goal of a legal system is to reconcile the social conflicts. Law is required only to ensure that people do not have to fight with each other just to protect their right to property, right to life and liberty and other rights secured to them by the legal system. The civil disputes are the conflicts between two parties, having lesser overtones for the social order, social harmony or the society as such. Hence absolute freedom is given to the parties to settle their disputes by compromises, of course, coming with certain legal consequences as well. However, the criminal disputes do not necessarily restrict themselves to only two parties to the dispute in terms of their scope, consequences and effect. The criminal acts tend to cast their effect and consequences even upon the society at large. Therefore, the law prescribes punishment, severe punishments and the extreme punishments, including death penalty for criminal acts.

However, more often then not the civil disputes or inter-se conflicts of two parties transforms themselves into criminal aspect. Therefore, the legal system plays empire to resolve the conflict between two parties; with the added task of ensuring that the adverse impact of dispute qua society at large is minimized. But still the core idea is to resolve the conflict between two sides by putting it to rest. Therefore, even the criminal law is required to give due regard to the wishes of the parties to dispute. Recognizing this principle only, the Indian legal System also provides for recognizing the compromise between two sides of a criminal dispute. Section 320 Cr.P.C. is an express provision in this regard. This section not only provides for compounding during the trial, but permits compounding even at appellate or revisional stage. However by its very nature and scope, Section 320 Cr.P.C. cannot be the sole repository; wherein the recognition to a compromise between the parties have; necessarily; to be confined. This section relates only to the offences prescribed under the Indian Penal Code. There are a lot more offences prescribed outside IPC. Even to the offences existing in the IPC new dimensions are added from time to time, making the existing offences to be lighter or stringent and even new modalities of proof of offences are being recognised in view of technological advancement. This necessitates and requires the need for looking beyond Section 320 Cr.P.C. to recognise the compromise between the parties to dispute. But to maintain the sanctity of the procedure prescribed for criminal trial; the Trial Court cannot be permitted to travel beyond the scope prescribed under that procedure. Hence the need for invoking Section 482 Cr.P.C. by the High Court.

But, as observed above, the wishes of only parties to the criminal dispute would not always be sufficient to terminate a criminal trial in view of the patent, latent or subtle effect; their conduct would have left qua the society at large. Therefore the offences committed by persons involved in governance or administration for acquiring official power or while exercising office power cannot be permitted to be compromised. Likewise, even the offences involving only two private persons, but reflecting depravity of character or involving causing intentional loss of life or causing intentional loss of property by extending imminent threat of loss of life; cannot be permitted to be compromised. Except the abovementioned grave offences, there is every reason that all other offences should be permitted to be compromised by the Court. Since the proof of offences before the Court, again would involve the conduct of the parties to dispute, therefore if the Court does not permit the same to be compromised then the parties would tend to play tricks upon the Court to ensure the acquittal of accused by subverting the administration of criminal justice. And it is never in the interest of administration of criminal justice to force the citizen to learn and adopt the tricks designed to be played upon Courts to subvert the justice system. So it would always be in the interest of justice itself; that the compromise between the parties is recognized and the citizen remain moored and committed to the essentials of the system of administration of justice, at least, qua those offences, which the interest of society does not permit to be compromised.

Hon'ble the Supreme Court has amply clarified the legal position on recognizing compromising in the case of Gian Singh Vs. State of Punjab and another, 2012(4) RCR (Criminal) 543, and has observed as under:-

“57. The position that emerges from the above discussion can be summarised thus: the power of the High Court in quashing a criminal proceeding or FIR or complaint in exercise of its inherent jurisdiction is distinct and different from the power given to a criminal court for compounding the offences under Section 320 of the Code. Inherent power is of wide plenitude with no statutory limitation but it has to be exercised in accord with the guideline engrafted in such power viz; (i) to secure the ends of justice or (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of any Court. In what cases power to quash the criminal proceeding or complaint or F.I.R may be exercised where the offender and victim have settled their dispute would depend on the facts and circumstances of each case and no category can be prescribed. However, before exercise of such power, the High Court must have due regard to the nature and gravity of the crime. Heinous and serious offences of mental depravity or offences like murder, rape, dacoity, etc. cannot be fittingly quashed even though the victim or victim's family and the offender have settled the dispute. Such offences are not private in nature and have serious impact on society. Similarly, any compromise between the victim and offender in relation to the offences under special statutes like Prevention of Corruption Act or the offences committed by public servants while working in that capacity etc; cannot provide for any basis for quashing criminal proceedings involving such offences. But the criminal cases having overwhelmingly and predominatingly civil flavour stand on different footing for the purposes of quashing, particularly the offences arising from commercial, financial, mercantile, civil, partnership or such like transactions or the offences arising out of matrimony relating to dowry, etc. or the family disputes where the wrong is basically private or personal in nature and the parties have resolved their entire dispute. In this category of cases, High Court may quash criminal proceedings if in its view, because of the compromise between the offender and victim, the possibility of conviction is remote and bleak and continuation of criminal case would put accused to great oppression and prejudice and extreme injustice would be caused to him by not quashing the criminal case despite full and complete settlement and compromise with the victim. In other words, the High Court must consider whether it would be unfair or contrary to the interest of justice to continue with the criminal proceeding or continuation of the criminal proceeding would tantamount to abuse of process of law despite settlement and compromise between the victim and wrongdoer and whether to secure the ends of justice, it is appropriate that criminal case is put to an end and if the answer to the above question(s) is in affirmative, the High Court shall be well within its jurisdiction to quash the criminal proceeding.”

The present case does not fall in anyone of the exceptions envisaged above. Hence, in view of the Affidavit dated 04.10.2018 sworn by petitioner No.1 in pursuance of the order dated 19.09.2018 passed by this Court, the Court feels that no useful purpose would be served by keeping the proceedings alive. It will be in the interest of justice, if the settlement reached between the parties is accepted.

Accordingly, the present petition is allowed. FIR No.36 dated 19.01.2015 registered under Sections 408,420,180,120-B of the IPC at Police Station DLF Qutab Enclave, Gurugram, District Gurugram and all consequential proceedings arising therefrom, on the basis of compromise arrived at between the parties are hereby quashed qua the present petitioners.
