The order passed by the learned Single Judge has been challenged to the extent relief was granted to the workman as salary for the period he was not permitted to join duty despite award passed by the Labour Court in his favour.

In terms of the award dated 12.9.1997, the respondent-workman was to be reinstated back in service with continuity. He submitted his joining report on 9.1.1998 but was permitted to join on 4.1.1999. He cannot be stated to be at fault. The learned Single Judge in the writ petition filed by the respondent-workman granted relief of wages for the aforesaid period, during which the workman was not allowed to join duty despite award of the Labour Court in his favour.

There is no error in the order passed by the learned Single Judge.

Accordingly, the appeal is dismissed. Consequently, the application for condonation of delay in filing thereof is also dismissed.
