tanker and the driver of the aforesaid tanker disclosed that the seized liquor was to be delivered to petitioner and two others.

4. Learned counsel appearing for the petitioner submits that no case under the Excise Act is made out against the petitioner as nothing has been recovered either from the possession of the petitioner or from his house, but I am not at all convinced with the aforesaid submissions, because the first information report reflects that the petitioner was found indulged in trade of illicit liquor.
