The learned counsel for the petitioner submits that despite his best efforts, he has not been able to trace out the address of the respondent. An opportunity was granted to effect service by way of substituted service. Efforts in this regard have not been initiated on account of lack of information. Both the petitioners are in dire financial condition and not in a position to furnish such information.

In the circumstances, the learned counsel for the petitioner does not wish to press the petitions and seeks to withdraw them with liberty to file fresh ones when requisite information is available.
