For Petitioner :Mr.S.Veeraraghavan

For Respondent : No appearance

ORDER

This Criminal Revision Petition has been preferred to set aside the order of the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate, Erode, dated 12.06.2017 passed in C.M.P.No.1012/2016.

2. This Revision Petition has originated from a petition filed by the petitioner before the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate Erode against the respondent under Sec.6 of the Tamil Nadu Prohibition of Charging Exorbitant Interest Act, 2003 for restoring the petitioner's 13 unfilled cheques and her brother's car and a sum of Rs. 78,48,117.00.

3. In the said petition it is alleged that she had availed a loan of Rs.74,65,500/- from the accused on various intervals and that was discharged by repaying a hefty sum of Rs.1,53,13,617/- along with exorbitant interest. It is further alleged that the petitioner was threatened by the respondent in various manner and her brother's Chevrolet Beat Red Colour car registered as TN-86-A-8766 has also been forcibly taken away from the custody of the petitioner. Hence the petitioner has filed the petition for restoration of vehicle along with return of 13 unfilled cheques issued by her.

4. The learned Chief Judicial Magistrate has dismissed the petition on the ground that the petitioner has not made out any prima facie case for taking the petition on file. Aggrieved over that the petitioner has filed the criminal revision petition to set aside the order.

5. Heard Mr.S.Veeraraghavan, learned counsel for the petitioner. There was no appearance on behalf of respondent.

6. The very contention of the petitioner is that she had repaid the loan amount availed from the accused with exorbitant interest and despite discharging the loan the respondent is holding her 13 unfilled cheques and her brother's Chevrolet Beat Red Colour car; in the main order itself the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate has observed that the petitioner has produced the bank statement in order to prove their contention of discharging the loan; it has been concluded by the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate that there is no prima facie proof produced before the Court to take the petition on file.

7. The allegations made in the petition along with the bank statement are found to be sufficient to show prima facie grounds to take this case on file. It is not necessary for the petitioner to produce all other materials or proof to substantiate her averments made in the complaint. The petitioner has knocked the door of the Court to avail the benefits of Special legislation like Tamil Nadu Prohibition of Charging Exorbitant Interest Act, 2003. It is submitted that the respondent had withheld the cheques which were not issued by the petitioner for legally enforceable debts. There is every possibility that the petitioner can be harassed by making use of those cheques. Further no money lender should do violent acts like seizing the properties of the debtors without any order of the Court.

8. The above Act would come to the rescue of the victims of loans on exorbitant interest and help them to get their unlawfully seized properties restored. In the absence of any motive to file the complaint against the respondent, it is not desirable to reject these kinds of petitions at the very inception without giving any opportunity for the petitioner to substantiate the allegations. The dismissal order under Sec.203 Cr.PC should be sparingly used only when the complaint does not disclose any material facts against the respondent. It is not necessary for the petitioner to substantiate her allegations at the stage of filing of complaint itself. The seriousness of the allegations made by the petitioner coupled with the copies of the bank accounts statements furnished, would show that there are materials to presume a prima facie case against the respondent.

9. The learned counsel for the petitioner invited the attention of this Court to the decision reported in AIR 1972 Supreme Court 1607 [Debendra Nath Bhattacharya & Ors vs State Of West Bengal & Anr] In the said judgment it is held as under:

"8. In the case before us, the learned Magistrate was in error in assuming that merely because the names of one or two former employees of the Company may be mentioned in the pay- sheets the whole prosecution case was actually demolished. Moreover, as the High Court had rightly pointed out, the complainant's actual evidence had fully supported and not contradicted any part of the complaint. No such absurdity was revealed by the complainant's evidence as to merit a forthright dismissal of the complaint under Section 203 Criminal Procedure Code. What the Magistrate had to determine at the stage of issue of process was not the correctness or the probability or improbability of individual items of evidence on disputable grounds, but the existence or otherwise of a prima facie, case on the assumption that what was stated could be true unless the prosecution allegations were so fantastic that they could not reasonably be held to be true."

10. In respect of the contention made at the stage of the issuing the process the Magistrate need not determine about the correctness or probability or improbability of the materials produced before it. In some serious cases the statement of the victim itself can serve as a prima facie material and it is not possible for the complainant to produce documents for each and every allegations at the time of filing the complaint itself.

11. Taking into consideration the above said facts and the well settled position of law, I feel that the order of the learned Chief Judicial Magistrate is liable to be set aside.
