already demolished, during the pendency of the petition and that nothing survives in the petition.

2. Learned counsel for the petitioners does not dispute that the impugned structure, which is the subject matter of the dispute, is already demolished.

3. The petitioners, however, apprehends that their rights against the landlords would be jeopardized.

4. In our view, nothing survives in this petition. The writ petition is accordingly disposed off as infructuous. The rights of the petitioners if any, against the landlord can be agitated in appropriate proceedings before the appropriate court.
