The plaintiff-respondent has since died. His legal representatives have not been brought on record. The stay application filed by the department seeking stay of the order passed by the learned Appellate Court was declined. It is now conceded that all the retirement benefits already stand paid to the employee. Learned State counsel, thus, submits that this appeal be dismissed having been rendered infructuous by lapse of time.

In that view of the matter, this appeal is ordered to be consigned to record having been rendered infructuous by lapse of time. Liberty is, however, granted to the department to get it restored, if need be.
