ORDER

This Writ Petition has been filed challenging the order passed by the first respondent, thereby allowed the appeal filed by the second respondent.

2. Heard the learned counsel appearing for the petitioner and the learned counsel appearing for the second respondent and perused the materials available on record.

3. The second respondent firm is covered under the Employees Provident Funds and Miscellaneous Provision Act, 1952 (herein after referred to as the “Act”). It failed to remit the Provident Fund and Insurance Fund dues with all eligible components of wages for the period from April 2009 to February 2012. In order to determine the amount payable in respect of the second respondent, an enquiry was initiated under Section 7A of the Act. The second respondent was summoned to appear before the enquiry with all supportive documents. During enquiry, the Enforcement Officer submitted his report stating that the second respondent has not enrolled 26 employees and also not paid Provident Fund, Insurance Fund and Employees' Pension Fund Contributions and Administrative Charges towards Provident Fund and Insurance Fund with all eligible components of wages. The Enforcement Officer also furnished the dues payable for omitted wages, but not furnished the same for non enrollment.

4. The second respondent contended before the enquiry officer that the Washing Allowance, Medical Allowance paid to their employees are not liable for PF deduction. They were paying wages over and above the minimum wages to its employees, EPF contribution, being paid on the basic wages and DA, which is over and above the minimum wages. The wages are split into components such as Basic, DA, HRA, Overtime Allowance, Washing Allowance, Special Allowance for the workers and in case of staff, under the components basic HRA, Conveyance and Special Allowance. Further, the Enforcement Officer has reported that where the employees were drawing a gross salary of less than Rs.6,500/- per month, the wages are split up into various allowances, such as conveyance, dress, outstation, performance, grade allowance, mobile allowance etc., the second respondent is paying the provident fund contributions only for the basic and DA. Even then, the first respondent allowed the appeal filed by the second respondent and set aside the order passed by the petitioner.

5. The learned counsel appearing for the petitioner would submit that the first respondent allowed the appeal by relying upon the Judgment reported in 1962 (3) SCR 978 in the case of Bridge & Roof Co (India) Ltd., Vs. Union of India, in which the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India held that the uniform is provided only to workers and not to all concerns in the second respondent establishment. The workers constitute a separate class in itself and all are getting the uniform and washing allowance to keep the uniform neat and clean and as such, the washing allowance has to be treated as part of basic wages. Further it is held that the Out Station Allowance is given to the workers on their posting outside the headquarters cannot be termed as an allowance earned while on duty for the reason that this allowance is not given to all. Similarly, Special allowance, performance allowance etc., are not earned necessarily by all the employees, so it will not constitute part of wages. Therefore, all components of wages will not form part of basic wage but only such allowance shall constitute wages which are earned by the employees across the board under an agreement of contract. Therefore, the appeal is partly allowed.

6. A perusal of the counter filed by the second respondent revealed that they were paying more than minimum wages as contemplated under the minimum wages and remitting contributions for the above wages. As a special gesture, the second respondent was paying allowances as fringe benefit to its employees which is not normally paid to one and all the employees. But the payments were made to one and all the employees in different logic and pattern, which could not be construed as basic wages as defined under Section 2(b) or Section 6 of the EPF Act. However, these allowances were not being uniformly paid among workers and were being paid based on their performance. Conveyance Allowance being paid to staff members according to their category and not to all uniformly. Further more, the authority is empowered to decide the dispute regarding contribution and liability of the employer, it does not give any such power to determine whether the minimum wage was bifurcated or spilt for the purpose of determining the contribution. Therefore, no liability could be fastened on the second respondent regarding the PF contribution on allowances especially when these payments are excluded under the contract of employment.

7. He also relied upon the Judgment of the Hon'ble Division Bench of this Court in the case of EID Parry India Ltd Vs RPFC Tamil Nadu reported in (1984) 1 LLJ 300, in which this Court held that far from contracting out of the statutory provision, parties are trying to be within the framework of the statute. This is because, the definition defining basic wage under clause (b), clearly states 'in accordance with the contract of employment'. Therefore, if in accordance with the contract of employment, the parties agree that a particular sum should be excluded, it cannot be held that it should be treated as basic wage. Therefore, the Appellate Authority, viz., the first respondent, rightly allowed the appeal, which does not require any interference by this Court.

8. A perusal of the order passed by the first respondent/Appellate Authority simply show that it relied upon the Judgement of the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India in the case of M/s.Bridge & Roof Co (India) Ltd., Vs. Union of India reported in 1962 (3) SCR 978 and allowed the appeal on the ground that the Enforcement Officer, in its report has not found whether the allowances are paid to all the employees across the board or to some of the employees etc.,

Therefore, it cannot be said that the allowances are earned by all the employees and therefore, the allowances are liable for deduction of PF contribution.

9. On the report submitted by the Enforcement Officer, the petitioner determined the dues on account of Provident Fund, Insurance and Employees Pension Fund Contributions and Administrative charges towards Provident Fund and Insurance Fund dues with all eligible components of wages for the period from March 2011 to September 2012, in accordance with the provision of EPF and MP Act. The Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Bridge and Roofs Co., Ltd Vs. Union of India and others reported in (1963) 3 SCR 978, held that for the basis for the exclusion in clause (ii) of the exceptions in Section 2(b) is that all that is not earned in all concerns or by all employees of a concern is excluded from basic wages. To this, the exclusion of dearness allowance in clause (ii) is an exception. But that exception has been corrected by including dearness allowance in Section 6 for the purpose of contribution. Dearness allowance which is an exception in the definition of “basic wages”, is included for the purpose of contribution by Section 6 and the real exceptions therefore in clause (ii) are the other exceptions besides dearness allowance, which has been included through Section 6.

10. The basic principles as laid down in the said case on a combined reading of Sections 2(b) and 6 are as follows :-

(a) Where the wage is universally, necessarily and ordinarily paid to all across the board such emoluments are basic wages.

(b) Where the payment is available to be specially paid to those who avail of the opportunity is not basic wages. By way of example it was held that overtime allowance, though it is generally in force in all concerns is not earned by all employees of a concern. It is also earned in accordance with the terms of the contract of employment but because it may not be earned by all employees of a concern, it is excluded from basic wages.

(c) Conversely, any payment by way of a special incentive or work is not basic wages.

11. Therefore, the components Conveyance Allowance and Washing Allowance is paid universally, necessarily and ordinarily paid to all employees of the second respondent. Therefore, both are liable for contribution under EPF Act. Further, the components of Conveyance

WP.No.34835 of 2014

Allowance/Transport Allowance, Medical Allowance, Washing

Allowance and attendance incentive has to be treated as components of “Basic Wages” for the purpose of Provident Fund as it has been paid to all employees. Thus, it is clear that all the allowance which are not specifically excluded from basic wages as given in Section 2 (b) of the Act are part of basic wages. They were earned by all the employees of the second respondent. Further the second respondent establishment failed to submit any material in order to substantiate their contention before the petitioner. Substantiate the contention means that the allowances in question being paid to its employees were either variable or were linked to any incentive for production resulting in greater output by an employee and that the allowances in question were not paid across the board to all employees in a particular category or were being paid especially to those who avail the opportunity. That apart, there is no available data on record to show that what were the norms of work prescribed for those workmen during the relevant period. Therefore, it is not possible to ascertain whether extra amounts paid to the workmen were in fact paid for the extra work which had exceeded the normal output prescribed for the workmen.

WP.No.34835 of 2014

12. In view of the above, the order passed by the first respondent is liable to be set aside and is set aside. Accordingly, this Writ Petition stands allowed. There shall be no order as to costs.
