3. It is the further submission of the learned counsel for the petitioner that, out of the 7 previous cases cited above, five previous cases ended in acquittal. Now, there are only two previous cases pending against the petitioner, Hence, he seeks bail to the petitioner,

4. Though, the learned counsel for the petitioner claims that, petitioner had been acquitted in five previous cases, the fact remains that, petitioner is an accused in the remaining two cases, and those cases are still pending to be disposed. Therefore, there is no change of circumstances warranting this Court to consider the bail petition in favour of the petitioner.
