been an error in calculating the number of days delay. That apart, the other grounds are on the merits of the case, which has been considered and rejected by this Court. The applicant has not made out any case to show as to how there is an error apparent on the face of the order under review or as to whether that they have come across new facts which despite their due diligence could not be raised during the hearing of the Revision.

3. This Court has taken note of the fact that the applicant has not been able to establish or prove their contention that the respondent herein was an encroacher and that he had come into possession of the property subsequent to the handing over of possession on 28.05.1990. This Court has also discussed the reasons as to why it has come to the said conclusion. The applicant if aggrieved by the order ought to have taken out an appeal and not come up with this review. The petitioner has not made out any grounds for reviewing the order.
