3. The learned counsel appearing for the 3rd respondent submitted that it is a civil dispute between the petitioner and the third respondent regarding a piece of land, which was let out for use and occupation of the third respondent by the petitioner.

4. Now, the petitioner and the third respondent have compromised the dispute and settled the issue.

5. The Additional Public Prosecutor representing the respondents 1 and 2 submitted that, after this complaint, no untoward incident happened to take cognizance and further the petitioner did not show any interest in the investigation. So, there is no progress in the investigation on his complaint.

6. The allegation of threat by the third respondent as a person politically powerful and influence does not exist as on date, since he does not belong to the party, which is ruling the State at present and also the
