The petitioner states that transportation services are provided to customers and that such services are classifiable under Services Accounting Code (SAC). Accordingly, the petitioner paid GST at 12% on such services. In those circumstances, it is stated that the respondent issued a notice in Form DRC-01A alleging short payment on the ground that the services provided by the petitioner should be classified under SAC 996601, which attracts GST at 18%. The petitioner replied to the said notice and explained that its services are classifiable under SAC 996511 and also produced relevant documents such as the consignment note. A notice in Form DRC-01 came to be issued thereafter by not accepting the reply of the petitioner. The present writ petition was filed in the said facts and circumstances.

2. Learned counsel for the petitioner submits that the impugned notices are in the nature of an adjudicatory order. He further submits that the nature of services provided by the petitioner cannot reasonably be classified under any heading other than SAC 996511. Since the impugned notices are in the nature of adjudicatory orders, learned counsel submits that replying thereto could become an empty formality.

3. In response to these contentions, M/s.E.Ranganayaki, learned Additional Government Pleader, who accepts notice on behalf of the respondents, submits that the impugned notices are undoubtedly show cause notices. She also points out that the petitioner responded to the show cause notices by seeking further time. Even if adverse orders were to be issued after examining the petitioner's reply, learned counsel submits that the petitioner is entitled to file statutory appeal in respect thereof. Therefore, learned counsel submits that the impugned notices contain no infirmity and that no interference is called for.

4. In exercise of discretionary jurisdiction, there are limited circumstances in which a show cause notice may be interfered with. The foremost of such circumstances is if the show cause notice was issued without jurisdiction. A show cause notice may also be interfered with if no case is made out even assuming that the statements made in the show cause notice are correct. In the case on hand, the dispute revolves around the classification of services provided by the petitioner. In the impugned notices, the respondent has taken the view that the services provided by the petitioner qualify as rental services which are classifiable under the SAC 996601 because of the extent of control exercised by the person availing of the services.

5. Upon examining the notices in Form DRC-01, the replies thereto and the impugned notices, I am of the view that this case does not fall within the limited category of cases in which a show cause notice may be assailed in a proceeding under Article 226 of the Constitution of India.

6. For reasons set out above, this writ petition is disposed of by declining to interfere with the impugned order. The petitioner is at liberty to reply to the impugned show cause notice and raise all objections in respect thereof. The respondent, in turn, is directed to consider all such objections before taking a decision in the matter. Consequently, connected miscellaneous petitions are closed.
