5. That in terms of the above compromise the above case may be disposed after recording compliance of the said memo accordingly in the interest of justice.”

9. Learned counsel for the Revision Petitioners submits that the respondent/complainant filed a complaint in STC.No.471 of 2015 against the Revision Petitioners under section 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act in respect of return of cheque amount of Rs.1,36,99,569/-. The trial court after considering the entire evidence on record, found the revision petitioners guilty under section 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act and sentenced them to undergo one year Simple Imprisonment and to pay the amount of Rs.1,36,99,569/- as compensation and in default, to undergo six months

Simple Imprisonment. He further submits that the Revision Petitioners/accused filed an appeal against the order of the trial court in C.A.No.345 of 2022 before the V Addl. District Judge, Coimbatore. During the pendency of the aforesaid appeal, the learned first appellate court has ordered to deposit a sum of Rs.27,40,000/- and the revision petitioners/accused deposited the amount as per the order of the first appellate court and thereafter the said appeal was also dismissed vide order dated 31.01.2022.

10. Aggrieved by the order dated 31.01.2022, the Revision Petitioners have preferred the present Criminal Revision Case before this court along with an application for suspending the sentence imposed on them in Crl.M.P.No.4526 and 4529 of 2022, wherein, this Court, on 08.04.2022, suspended the sentence imposed on the petitioners subject to condition that the 2nd and 3rd petitioners shall deposit 30% of the cheque amount being Rs.41,10,000/- to the credit of STC.No.471 of 2015 before the trial court. Accordingly, the revision petitioners have also complied with the condition by depositing the amount.

11. It was also submitted by the learned counsel for the appellant that during the pendency of the Criminal Revision Case, the respondent also filed a money recovery suit on the advice of the counsel in O.S.No.7 & 8 of 2020 before the I Addl. District and Sessions Judge and Commercial Judge, Kodagu, Madikkeri. The suit was decreed against the Revision Petitioners on 06.08.2022 for the payment of Rs.94,26,863/- and Rs.77,39,652/- with interest at the rate of 13% per annum to the respondent. Thereafter, aggrieved by the aforesaid judgment of the criminal Judge, the Revision Petitioners filed commercial Appeals bearing Nos.442 and 443 of 2022 on the file of High Court of Karnataka, Bengaluru. During the pendency of the present criminal revision before this Court, the said commercial appeals were withdrawn. Learned counsels submitted that the said appeals were withdrawn by the Revision Petitioners and now, only the present case is pending in respect of the alleged amount between the parties.

12. Learned counsel for the Revision petitioners submits that during the pendency of the present Revision Petition, the Revision Petitioners as well as the respondents have entered into a compromise outside the Court. Accordingly, a compromise deed was signed between the parties on 19.09.2024 which is taken on record. In the said compromise deed, terms and conditions were also laid down and it was stated that the Revision

Petitioners will pay the entire amount of Rs.1,45,00,000/- to the respondent /complainant including the amount which was deposited by the trial court by the order of this court at the time of admission.

13. Learned counsel for the Revision petitioners have filed an application today before this Court signed by the Revision Petitioners and 1st respondent/complainant as well as counsel for both the parties with the prayer to compound the offence under section 147 of the Negotiable Instruments Act as the entire amount has been paid to the respondent/complainant and the parties have entered into a compromise and this court is empowered to compound the offence under section 147 of the Negotiable Instruments Act.

14. The said application is also taken on record today.

15. In paragraph 6 of the said application, it has been clearly stated by the parties that the petitioners/accused are willing to compound the offence and the respondent/complainant is also agreeing to compound the offence by receiving a sum of Rs.1,45,00,000/- as full and final settlement of the cheque amount and other disputes between the petitioner and respondent/complainant and the mode of payments has also been given in para 6 of the application.

16. Mr.A.Palaninathan, the learned counsel for the 1st respondent submits that before this court, on the basis of the compromise deed dated 19.09.2024, as per the condition laid down in paragraph 6 of the present application dated 16.12.2024, his client has received the entire amount of Rs.1,45,00,000/- from the Revision petitioners towards the disputed cheque amount and no amount is due pending against the Revision Petitioners and he submitted that he has no objection if this court exercising his power under section 147 of Negotiable Instruments Act to compound the offence and acquit the revision petitioners from the charges and discharge them.

17. Learned counsel for the Respondent further submits that as the amount was deposited before the trial court in compliance of the order passed by this Court dated 08.04.2022 in CrI.M.P.No.4526 and 4529 of 2022, the Union Bank of India, Valparai Branch, Coimbatore District, without any authority of law has deducted TDS to the tune of Rs.86,925/- which is totally illegal and without jurisdiction. This fact has also been mentioned in paragraph 7 of the application on 16.12.2024 and it was prayed that the Bank be directed to refund the said amount of Rs.86,925/- which was taken towards TDS without any authority as the said amount was deposited before the Court by order of this Court and there is no provision in any law to deduct the TDS amount if the amount is deposited by order of this Court.

13. Learned counsel for the Revision Petitioners further submits that the present Revision has been filed on 10.03.2022 before this Court and on the basis of change in circumstances, as the parties have entered into Memorandum of Compromise, it was prayed to this Court to compound the offence. It was further argued by the learned counsel for the Revision Petitioners that this Court has inherent powers to compound the offence, so that, ends of justice could be secured as the object of Negotiable Instruments Act is primarily compensatory and not punitive and moreover Section 147 of NI Act would have an overriding effect on section 320 Cr.P.C. Irrespective of which stage, the parties are compromising with the kind leave of this Hon'ble Court.

14. In support of his arguments, learned counsel for the Revision Petitioners has submitted that in the case of Damodar S. Prabhu vs. Sayed Babalal H reported at 2010 (2) SCC (Cri) 1328, the Hon'ble Apex Court had formulated the guidelines for compounding the offence under section 138 N.I.

Act wherein in para 21, it was pleased to observe as under :

"With regard to the progression of litigation in cheque bouncing cases, the learned Attorney General has urged this Court to frame guidelines for a graded scheme of imposing costs on parties who unduly delay compounding of the offence. It was submitted that the requirement of deposit of the costs will act as a deterrent for delayed composition, since at present, free and easy compounding of offences at any stage, however belated, gives an incentive to the drawer of the cheque to delay settling the cases for years. An application for compounding made after several years not only results in the system being burdened but the complainant is also deprived of effective justice. In view of this submission, we direct that the following guidelines be followed:-

THE GUIDELINES

(i) In the circumstances, it is proposed as follows:

(a) That directions can be given that the Writ of Summons be suitably modified making it clear to the accused that he could make an application for compounding of the offences at the first or second hearing of the case and that if such an application is made, compounding may be allowed by the court without imposing any costs on the accused.

(b) If the accused does not make an application for compounding as aforesaid, then if an application for compounding is made before the Magistrate at a subsequent stage, compounding can be allowed subject to the condition that the accused will be required to pay 10% of the cheque amount to be deposited as a condition for compounding with the Legal Services Authority, or such authority as the Court deems fit.

(c) Similarly, if the application for compounding is made before the Sessions Court or a High Court in revision or appeal, such compounding may be allowed on the condition that the accused pays 15% of the cheque amount by way of costs.

(d) Finally, if the application for compounding is made before the Supreme Court, the figure would increase to 20% of the cheque amount."

15. Learned counsel for the Revision petitioners also submitted that in the case of M/s Meters and Instruments Private Limited and another vs. Kanchan Mehta reported at 2017 (7) Supreme 558, the Hon'ble the Apex Court in para 18, was pleased to observe as under :

i) Offence under Section 138 of the Act is primarily a civil wrong. Burden of proof is on accused in view presumption under Section 139 but the standard of such proof is "preponderance of probabilities". The same has to be normally tried summarily as per provisions of summary trial under the Cr.P.C. but with such variation as may be appropriate to proceedings under Chapter XVII of the Act. Thus read, principle of Section 258 Cr.P.C. will apply and the Court can close the proceedings and discharge the accused on satisfaction that the cheque amount with assessed costs and interest is paid and if there is no reason to proceed with the punitive aspect.

(ii) The object of the provision being primarily compensatory, punitive element being mainly with the object of enforcing the compensatory element, compounding at the initial stage has to be encouraged but is not debarred at later stage subject to appropriate compensation as may be found acceptable to the parties or the Court.

(iii) Though compounding requires consent of both parties, even in absence of such consent, the Court, in the interests of justice, on being satisfied that the complainant has been duly compensated, can in its discretion close the proceedings and discharge the accused.

(iv) Procedure for trial of cases under Chapter XVII of the Act has normally to be summary. The discretion of the Magistrate under second proviso to Section 143, to hold that it was undesirable to try the case summarily as sentence of more than one year may have to be passed, is to be exercised after considering the further fact that apart from the sentence of imprisonment, the Court has jurisdiction under Section 357(3) Cr.P.C. to award suitable compensation with default sentence under Section 64 IPC and with further powers of recovery under Section 431 Cr.P.C. With this approach, prison sentence of more than one year may not be required in all cases.

(v) Since evidence of the complaint can be given on affidavit, subject to the Court summoning the person giving affidavit and examining him and the bank's slip being prima facie evidence of the dishonor of cheque, it is unnecessary for the Magistrate to record any further preliminary evidence. Such affidavit evidence can be read as evidence at all stages of trial or other proceedings. The manner of examination of the person giving affidavit can be as per Section 264 Cr.P.C. The scheme is to follow summary procedure except where exercise of power under second proviso to Section 143 becomes necessary, where sentence of one year may have to be awarded and compensation under Section 357(3) is considered inadequate, having regard to the amount of the cheque, the financial capacity and the conduct of the accused or any other circumstances'.

16. Learned counsel for the Revision Petitioners further has relied upon the judgment of Gujarat High Court in the case of Kripal Singh Pratap Singh Ori vs. Salvinder Kaur Hardip Singh reported at 2004 Cr.L. J. 3786 wherein, the Gujarat High Court was pleased to observe as under:-

WEB COPY

31. In the circumstances, it is hereby declared that the compromise arrived between the parties to this litigation out of court is accepted as genuine and the order of conviction and sentence passed by the learned JMFC, Vadodara and confirmed in appeal by the learned Sessions Judge, Fast Track Court, Vadodara, therefore, on the given set of facts are hereby quashed and set aside as this court intends, otherwise to secure the ends of justice as provided under section 482 Cr.P.C. Obviously the order disposing Revision Application would not have any enforceable effect."

17. Learned counsel for the Revision Petitioners has also relied upon the judgment of Hon'ble the Apex Court in the case of Vinay Devanna Nayak vs. Ryot Seva Sahkari Bank Limited reported at AIR 2008 SC 716 wherein the Hon'ble Apex Court was pleased to observe as under :

"18. Taking into consideration even the said provision (Section 147) and the primary object underlying Section 138, in our judgment, there is no reason to refuse compromise between the parties. We, therefore, dispose of the appeal on the basis of the settlement arrived at between the appellant and the respondent.

19. For the foregoing reasons the appeal deserves to be allowed and is accordingly allowed by holding that since the matter has been compromised between the parties and the amount of Rs.45,000/- has been paid by the appellant towards full and final settlement to the respondent-bank towards its dues, the appellant is entitled to acquittal. The order of conviction and sentence recorded by all courts is set aside and he is acquitted of the charge levelled against him."

18. Learned counsel for the Revision Petitioners has argued that the law regarding compounding of offences under the N.I. Act is very clear and is no more resintegra and the offences under the N.I. Act can be compounded even at any stage of the proceedings. He submits that in terms of the aforesaid law laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court, the parties may be permitted to compound the offence and the conviction of the petitioners be set aside.

19. Per contra, Mr.A.Gopinath, the learned Govt. Advocate (crl.side) appearing for the 2nd respondent / State submits that as the Revision Petitioners have been convicted by both the Courts below, there is no justification to compound the offence at this stage under section 147 of the Negotiable Instruments Act on the basis of the compromise Deed. In these circumstances, it is admitted by both parties that the entire cheque amount of Rs.1,45,00,000/- has been paid. He also submits that the power to compound the offence under section 147 of the Negotiable Instruments Act be exercised by the court, if there is no alternative remedy available.

20. The learned Govt. Advocate (crl.side) also further submitted that the amount of Rs.86,925 which was deducted by the Bank... towards TDS does not appear to be justified as the Bank has no jurisdiction to deduct the TDS amount on the court deposit amount. Thus, he supports the arguments advanced by the learned counsel for the respondent/complainant to refund the said amount.

22. I have heard the learned counsel for the Revision Petitioners, learned counsel for the 1st respondent and learned Govt. Advocate (crl.side) appearing for the 2nd respondent / State and perused the application filed today for compounding of the offence under section 147 of Negotiable Instruments Act and also the materials placed on record.

23. Considering the facts as narrated above, the following question arose for consideration.

'Whether the order passed by the Appellate Court confirming the conviction of the trial court under section 138 of Negotiable Instruments Act can be nullified by the High Court on the basis of compromise entered between the parties'

24. Before answering the aforesaid question as framed, I shall examine the relevant provision of the Cr.P.C., as well as the Negotiable

Instrument Act. I may extract Section 320 of Cr.P.C., and section 147 of Negotiable Instruments Act.

Judge, Kodagu, Madikeri against the Petitioners are settled and the commercial appeals are withdrawn or disposed off accordingly.

5. That in terms of the above compromise the above case may be disposed after recording compliance of the said memo accordingly in the interest of justice.”

In pursuance of entering the Compromise Memo dated 19.09.2024, a petition for compounding the offence under section 147 of Negotiable Instruments Act, signed by both parties and their respective counsel was filed on 16.12.2024, wherein, the mode of payments made in pursuance of the Compromise Memo dated 19.09.2024 was mentioned as follows:

I. The petitioner has handed over a sum of Rs.18,00,000/- to the respondent/complainant on 19.09.2024 through Demand Draft bearing No.021092 dated 31.08.2024 drawn on IDBI Bank in favour of the respondent/complainant.

II. The petitioner has paid a sum of Rs.45,00,000/- through Demand Draft bearing No.005657 dated 09.10.2024 drawn on IDBI Bank, Chickmangalur Branch, karnataka received by the respondent on 15.10.2024 by settling the Commercial Appeal No.442/2022 and 443/2022 on the file of High Court of Karnataka, Bangalore.

III. The petitioner / accused submits that a sum of Rs.79,29,649/- was transferred from the deposited amount held in the account of the District Munsif cum Judicial Magistrate, Valparaion 24.10.2024 to the account of the Respondent/Complainant.

IV. The Petitioner/Accused has paid and amount of Rs.1,83,426/- through demand Draft bearing No.021152 dated 07.11.2024 drawn on IDBI Bank, Chickmangalur Branch, Karnataka, received by the respondent on 10.12.2024.

V. The petitioner/accused submits that a sum of Rs.86,925/- was deducted as TDS from one of the deposits deposited before the learned district Munsif cum Judicial Magistrate, Valparai in STC.No.471 of 2015 is yet to be released by the Union Bank of India, Valparai Branch.

26. It is well settled that inherent power of the Court can be exercised only when no other remedy is available to the litigants and nor a specific remedy as provided by the statute. It is also well settled that if an effective, alternative remedy is available, the High Court will not exercise its inherent power, especially when the Revision Petitioners may not have availed of that remedy. The power can be exercised by the High Court to secure the ends of justice, prevent abuse of the process of any court and to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code or Act, depending upon the facts of the given case. This Court can always take note of any miscarriage of justice and prevent the same by exercising its power. These powers are neither limited, nor curtailed by any other provision of the Code or Act. However, such inherent powers are to be exercised sparingly and with caution

27. In the instant case, it is true that the appeal was dismissed and the conviction and sentence was upheld by the appellate court, but it cannot be lost sight of the fact that this Court has power to intervene in exercise of its power only with a view to do the substantial justice or to avoid a miscarriage and the spirit of compromise arrived at between the parties. This is perfectly justified and legal too.

28. I have considered the judgments cited by the learned counsel for the Revision Petitioners as well as by the learned Counsel for the State and other decisions of the Hon'ble Apex Court and I do not think it necessary to enlist those decisions which are taken into consideration for the purpose of the present proceedings.

WEB COPY

29. In the instant case, the Revision Petitioners are invoking the inherent power of this court after dismissal of the appeal confirming his conviction and sentence. In these circumstances, I have to examine as to whether for entertaining the aforesaid case, any special circumstances are made out or not, so it can be legitimately argued and inferred and held that in all cases where the Revision Petitioners are able to satisfy this Court that there are special circumstances which can be clearly spelt out subsequent proceeding invoking inherent power of this court can be modified and cannot be thrown away on that technical argument as to its sustainability once the contesting parties entered into subsequent compromise.

30. In the case of Krishan Vs. Krishnaveni, reported in (1997) 4 SCC 241, Hon'ble the Apex Court has held that though the inherent power of the High Court is very wide, yet the same must be exercised sparingly and cautiously particularly in a case where the applicant is shown to have already invoked the revisional jurisdiction under section 397 of the Code. Only in cases where the High Court finds that there has been failure of justice or misuse of judicial mechanism or procedure, sentence or order was not correct, the High Court may in its discretion prevent the abuse of process or miscarriage of justice by exercising its power.

31. In the case of S.W. Palankattkar & others Vs. State of Bihar, 2002 (44) ACC 168, it has been held by the Hon'ble Apex Court that quashing of the criminal proceedings is an exception than a rule. The inherent powers of the High Court itself envisages three circumstances under which the inherent jurisdiction may be exercised:-(i) to give effect an order under the Code, (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of the court ; (iii) to otherwise secure the ends of justice. The power of High Court is very wide but should be exercised very cautiously to do real and substantial justice for which the court alone exists.

32. For adjudicating the instant case, the facts as stated hereinabove are very relevant. Here, the Revision Petitioners has attempted to invoke the jurisdiction of this court.

33. I am not in agreement that when the adjudication of a criminal offence has reached to the state of revisional level, there cannot be any compromise without permission of the court in all case including the offence punishable under 'N.I. Act' or the offence mentioned in Table-1 (one) can be compounded only if High Court or Court of Sessions grants permission for such purpose. The Court presently, concerned with an offence punishable under 'N.I. Act'.

34. It is evident that the permissibility of the compounding of an offence is linked to the perceived seriousness of the offence and the nature of the remedy provided. On this point I can refer to the following extracts from an academic commentary [Cited from : K.N.C. Pillai, R.V. Kelkar's Criminal Procedure, 5th Edition :

"17.2 - compounding of offences – A crime is essentially a wrong against the society and the State. Therefore, any compromise between the accused person and the individual victim of the crime should not absolve the accused from criminal responsibility. However, where the offences are essentially of a private nature and relatively not quite serious, the Code considers it expedient to recognize some of them as compoundable offences and some others as compoundable only with the permission of the court..."

35. Section 147 of NI Act begins with a non obstante clause and such clause is being used in a provision to communicate that the provision shall prevail despite anything to the contrary in any other or different legal provisions. So, in light of the compass provided, a dispute in the nature of complaint under section 138 of N.I. Act, can be settled by way of compromise irrespective of any other legislation including Cr.P.C. In general and section 320 (1)(2) or (6) of the Cr.P.C. in particular. The scheme of section 320 Cr.P.C. deals mainly with procedural aspects; but it simultaneously crystallizes certain enforceable rights and obligation. Hence, this provision has an element of substantive legislation and therefore, it can be said that the scheme of section 320 does not lay down only procedure; but still, the status of the scheme remains under a general law of procedure and as per the accepted proposition of law, the special law would prevail over general law. For the sake of convenience, I would like to quote the observations of Hon'ble the Apex Court in the case of Municipal Corporation, Indore vs. Ratnaprabha reported in (AIR 1977 SC 308) which reads as under :

"As has been stated, clause (b) of section 138 of the Act provides that the annual value of any building shall "notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force" be deemed to be the gross annual rent for which the building might "reasonably at the time of the assessment be expected to be let from year to year" While therefore, the requirement of the law is that the reasonable letting value should determine the annual value of the building, it has also been specifically provided that this would be so "notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force". It appears to us that it would be a proper interpretation of the provisions of clause (b) of Section 138 of the Act to hold that in a case where the standard rent of a building has been fixed under Section 7 of the Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act, and there is nothing to show that there has been fraud or collusion, that would be its reasonable letting value, but, where this is not so, and the building has never been let out and is being used in a manner where the question of fixing its standard rent does not arise, it would be permissible to fix its reasonable rent without regard to the provisions of the Madhya Pradesh Accommodation Control Act, 1961. This view will, in our opinion, give proper effect to the non-obstante clause in clause (b) with due regard to its other provision that the letting value should be "reasonable"

36. The expression 'special law' means a provision of law, which is not applicable generally but which applies to a particular or specific subject or class of subjects. Section 41 of Indian Penal Code stands on the same footing and defines the phrase special law. In this connection I would like to quote the well accepted proposition of law emerging from various observations made by the Hon'ble Apex Court in different decisions as a gist of the principle and it can be summarised as under:

"When a special law or a statute is applicable to a particular subject, then the same would prevail over a general law with regard to the very subject, is the accepted principle in the field of interpretation of statute."

37. In reference to offence under section 138 of N.I. Act read with section 147 of the said Act, the parties are at liberty to compound the matter at any stage even after the dismissal of the revision/appeal. Even a convict undergoing imprisonment with the liability to pay the amount of fine imposed by the court and/or under an obligation to pay the amount of compensation if awarded, as per the scheme of N.I. Act, can compound the matter. The complainant i.e. person or persons affected can pray to the court that the accused, on compounding of the offence may be released by invoking jurisdiction of this court. If the parties are asked to approach the Apex Court then, what will be situation, is a question which is required to be considered in the background of another accepted progressive and pragmatic principle accepted by our courts that if possible, the parties should be provided justice at the door step. The phrase "justice at the door step" has taken the court to think and reach to a conclusion that it can be considered and looked into as one of such special circumstances for the purpose of compounding the offence under section 147 of the N. I. Act.

38. It is also well settled that the operation or effect of a general Act may be curtailed by special Act even if a general Act contains a non obstante clause. But here is not a case where the language of section 320 Cr.P.C. would come in the way in recording the compromise or in compounding the offence punishable under section 138 of the N.I. Act. On the contrary provisions of section 147 of N.I. Act though starts with a non obstante clause, is an affirmative enactment and this is possible to infer from the scheme that has overriding effect on the intention of legislature reflected in section 320 Cr.P.C.

39. Merely because the litigation has reached to a revisional stage or that even beyond that stage, the nature and character of the offence would not change automatically and it would be wrong to hold that at revisional stage, the nature of offence punishable under Section 138 of the N.I. Act should be treated as if the same is falling under table-II of Section 320 IPC. I would like to reproduce some part of the statement of objects and reasons of the Negotiable Instruments (Amendment & Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 2002

"The Negotiable Instrument Act 1881 was amended by the Banking, Public Financial Institutions and Negotiable Instrument Laws (Amendment) Act, 1988 wherein a new Chapter XVII was incorporated for penalties in case of dishonour of cheques due to insufficiency of funds in the account of the drawer of the cheque. These provisions were incorporated with a view to encourage the culture of use of cheques and enhancing the credibility of the instrument. The existing provisions in the Negotiable Instrument Act, 1981, namely Section 138 to 142 in Chapter XVII have been found deficient in dealing with dishonour of cheques. Not only the punishment provided in the Act has proved to be inadequate, the procedure prescribed for the courts to deal with such matters has been found to be cumbersome. The Courts are unable to dispose of such cases expeditiously in a time bound manner in view of the procedure contained in the Act.

2. A large number of cases are reported to be pending under Sections 138 and 142 of the Negotiable Instruments Act in various courts in the country. Keeping in view the large number of complaints under the said Act, pending in various courts, a Working Group was constituted to review Section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1981 and make recommendations as to what changes were needed to effectively achieve the purpose of that Section.

4. Keeping in view the recommendations of the Standing Committee on finance and other R/SCR.A/2491/2018 ORDER representations, it has been decided to bring out, inter alia the following amendments in the Negotiable Instrument Act 1881, namely.

- (i) xxxxxx*
- (ii) xxxxxx*
- (iii) xxxxxx*
- (iv) to prescribe procedure for dispensing with preliminary evidence of the complainant.*
- (v) xxxxxx*

(vi) xxxxxx

(vii) to make the offences under the Act compoundable.

6. The Bill seeks to achieve the above objects."

40. In a commentary the following observations have been made with regard to offence punishable under section 138 of the N.I. Act. [Cited from : Arun Mohan, Some thoughts towards law reforms on the topic of Section 138 Negotiable Instrument Act -Tackling an avalanche of cases] :

"... .. Unlike that for other forms of crime, the punishment here (in so far as the complainant is concerned) is not a means of seeking retribution, but is more a means to ensure payment of money. The complainant's interest lies primarily in recovering the money rather than seeing the drawer of the cheque in jail. The threat of jail is only a mode to ensure recovery. As against the accused who is willing to undergo a jail term, there is little available as remedy for the holder of the cheque. If we were to examine the number of complaints filed which were 'compromised' or 'settled' before the final judgment on one side and the cases which proceeded to judgment and conviction on the other, we will find that the bulk was settled and only a miniscule number continued."

41. It is quite obvious that with respect to the offence of dishonour of cheques, it is the compensatory aspect of the remedy which should be given priority over the punitive aspect.

42. So the intention of the legislature and object of enacting "Banking", Public Financial Institutions and the Negotiable Instrument Laws (Amended Act) 1988 and subsequent enactment, i.e., Negotiable Instruments (Amendment & Miscellaneous Provisions Act 2002 leads this Court to a conclusion that the offence made punishable under Section 138 of N.I. Act is not only an offence qua property but it is also of the nature of an economic offence, though not covered in the list of statutes enacted in reference to Section 468 of Cr.P.C. Thus, the parties, in reference to offence under Section 138 N.I. Act read with Section 147 of the said Act are at liberty to compound the matter at any stage even after the dismissal of the proceedings.

43. In the instant case, the problem herein is with the tendency of litigants to belatedly choose compounding as a means to resolve their dispute, furthermore, the arguments on behalf of the Govt. Advocate (crl.side) on the fact that unlike Section 320 Cr.P.C., Section 147 of the Negotiable Instruments Act provides no explicit guidance as to what stage compounding can or cannot be done and whether compounding can be done at the instance of the complainant or with the leave of the court.

44. I am also conscious of the view that judicial endorsement of the above quoted guidelines as given in the case of Damodar S. Prabhu (supra) could be seen as an act of judicial law making and therefore an intrusion into the legislative domain. It must be kept in mind that Section 147 of the Act does not carry any guidance on how to proceed with the compounding of offences under the Act. I have already explained that the scheme contemplated under Section 320 of the Cr.P.C. cannot be followed in the strict sense.

45. In view of the aforesaid discussion, the parties, in reference to offence under Section 138 N.I. Act read with Section 147 of the said Act are at liberty to compound the matter at any stage. The complainant i.e. the person or persons affected can pray to the court that the accused, on compounding of the offence may be released by invoking inherent jurisdiction of this Court.

46. Generally, the powers available would not have been exercised when a statutory remedy under the law is available, however, considering the peculiar set of facts and circumstances it would not be in the interest of justice to relegate the parties to the court. Additionally when both the parties have invoked the jurisdiction of this Court and there is no bar on exercise of powers and the inherent powers of this court can always be invoked for imparting justice and bringing a quietus to the issue between the parties.

47. As discussed above, the court is inclined to hold accordingly only because there is no formal embargo in section 147 of the N.I. Act. This principle would not help any convict in any other law where other applicable independent provisions are existing as the offence punishable under section 138 of the N.I. Act is distinctly different from the normal offences made punishable under Chapter XVII of IPC (i.e. the offences qua property).

48. In view of the observations and in view of the guidelines as laid down in the case of Damodar S. Prabhu (Supra) and also in view of the observations made in the judgment referred above and taking into account the fact that the parties have settled the dispute amicably by way of compromise, this Court is of the view that the compounding of the offence as required to be permitted.

49. Accordingly, the present Criminal Revision Case is disposed of in terms of Compromise/Settlement Memo arrived at between the parties to this litigation out of Court. The impugned conviction and sentence passed in
