The respondent is produced in person. He had produced the joint memorandum of compromise signed by the parties. It appears that the husband had not complied with certain conditions in the compromise, which has prompted this contempt petition.

2. A perusal of the compromise shows that the parties have agreed to part ways and only the financials had to be worked-out. Though the marriage of the husband is prior to the compromise, after knowing the marriage there was a compromise entered into between the parties. We therefore do not see any cause for contempt.

3. Accordingly, this contempt petition is dismissed. The statutory notice or warrant issued against the respondent is recalled. Consequently, connected applications are closed.
