25.07.2024

1. The present petition is filed seeking quashing of FIR No. 471/2017 dated 10.07.2017, registered at Police Station Bindapur, for offence under Section 304A of the Indian Penal Code, 1860 ('IPC').
2. The FIR was registered on a complaint alleging that the deceased, namely, Vinay Prakash Rai (son of Respondent Nos. 2 and 3), expired on 10.07.2017, due to electrocution at the construction site located at 47/2, Indra Park Extension, East Uttam Nagar, Delhi-110059, managed by the petitioner.
3. Chargesheet has been filed in the present case.
4. It is alleged that the electric work at the construction site was not proper, and was carried out negligently, which led to the death of the deceased by electrocution.
5. The learned counsel for the petitioner submits that the petitioner/accused has already settled with the family members of the deceased.

6. The present petition is filed on the ground that the matter is amicably settled between the parties, of their own free will, without any coercion, pressure or undue influence by an agreement dated 25.06.2019 whereby the parties agreed for a full and final settlement amount of ₹6,00,000/-. However, since there were some unresolved issues between the parties, they were referred to Delhi High Court Mediation and Conciliation Centre by this Court by order dated 02.05.2024 and this led to the formation of another Settlement Agreement dated 31.05.2024 whereby the parties agreed for a full and final settlement and it was agreed that the petitioner shall pay a further sum of ₹3,00,000/- to Respondent Nos. 2 and 3.

7. In terms of the Settlement Agreements dated 25.06.2019 and 31.05.2024, out of the total settlement amount of ₹9,00,000/- (Nine Lakhs Only), an amount of ₹7,50,000/- already stands paid to Respondent Nos. 2 and 3, and the balance settlement amount of ₹1,50,000/- (Rupees One Lakh Fifty Thousand Only) is handed over to Respondent No. 2 in Court today in cash.

8. The petitioner and Respondent No. 2 are present before this Court in person and have been duly identified by the Investigating Officer. Respondent No. 3 is stated to have expired during the pendency of the present proceedings and the said fact is recorded in the order dated 10.10.2023.

9. Respondent No. 2, on being asked, states that he does not wish to pursue the proceedings arising out of the present FIR, and has no objection if the proceedings are quashed.

10. Offence under Section 304A of the IPC is non-compoundable.

11. It is well settled that the High Court while exercising its powers under Section 482 of the CrPC can compound offences which are non-compoundable under the Code on the ground that there is a compromise between the accused and the complainant. The Hon'ble Apex Court has laid down parameters and guidelines for High Court while accepting settlement and quashing the proceedings. In the case of Narinder Singh & Ors. v. State of Punjab & Anr. : (2014) 6 SCC 466, the Hon'ble Supreme Court had observed as under :-

“29. In view of the aforesaid discussion, we sum up and lay down the following principles by which the High Court would be guided in giving adequate treatment to the settlement between the parties and exercising its power under Section 482 of the Code while accepting the settlement and quashing the proceedings or refusing to accept the settlement with direction to continue with the criminal proceedings:

29.1. Power conferred under Section 482 of the Code is to be distinguished from the power which lies in the Court to compound the offences under Section 320 of the Code. No doubt, under Section 482 of the Code, the High Court has inherent power to quash the criminal proceedings even in those cases which are not compoundable, where the parties have settled the matter between themselves. However, this power is to be exercised sparingly and with caution.

29.2. When the parties have reached the settlement and on that basis petition for quashing the criminal proceedings is filed, the guiding factor in such cases would be to secure:

- (i) ends of justice, or*
- (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of any court.*

While exercising the power the High Court is to form an opinion on either of the aforesaid two objectives.

29.3. Such a power is not to be exercised in those prosecutions which involve heinous and serious offences of mental depravity or offences like murder, rape, dacoity, etc. Such offences are not private in nature and have a serious impact on society. Similarly, for the offences alleged to have been committed under special statute like the Prevention of Corruption Act or the offences committed by public servants while working in that capacity are not to be quashed merely on the basis of compromise between the victim and the offender.

29.4. On the other hand, those criminal cases having overwhelmingly and predominantly civil character, particularly those arising out of commercial transactions or arising out of matrimonial relationship or family disputes should be quashed when the parties have resolved their entire disputes among themselves.

29.5. While exercising its powers, the High Court is to examine as to whether the possibility of conviction is remote and bleak and continuation of criminal cases would put the accused to great oppression and prejudice and extreme injustice would be caused to him by not quashing the criminal cases.”

12. Similarly, in the case of Parbatbhai Aahir & Ors. v. State of Gujarat & Anr. : (2017) 9 SCC 641, the Hon’ble Supreme Court had observed as under :-

“16. The broad principles which emerge from the precedents on the subject, may be summarised in the following propositions:

16.1. Section 482 preserves the inherent powers of the High Court to prevent an abuse of the process of any court or to secure the ends of justice. The provision does not confer new powers. It only recognises and preserves powers which inhere in the High Court.

16.2. The invocation of the jurisdiction of the High Court to quash a first information report or a criminal proceeding on the ground that a settlement has been arrived at between the offender and the victim is not the same as the invocation of jurisdiction for the purpose of compounding an offence. While compounding an offence, the power of the court is governed by the provisions of Section 320 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. The power to quash under Section 482 is attracted even if the offence is non-compoundable.

16.3. In forming an opinion whether a criminal proceeding or complaint should be quashed in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482, the High Court must evaluate whether the ends of justice would justify the exercise of the inherent power.

16.4. While the inherent power of the High Court has a wide ambit and plenitude it has to be exercised (i) to secure the ends of justice, or (ii) to prevent an abuse of the process of any court.

16.5. The decision as to whether a complaint or first information report should be quashed on the ground that the offender and victim have settled the dispute, revolves ultimately on the facts and circumstances of each case and no exhaustive elaboration of principles can be formulated.

*16.6. In the exercise of the power under Section 482 and while dealing with a plea that the dispute has been settled, the High Court must have due regard to the nature and gravity of the offence. Heinous and serious offences involving mental depravity or offences such as murder, rape and dacoity cannot appropriately be quashed though the victim or the family of the victim have settled the dispute. Such offences are, truly speaking, not private in nature but have a serious impact upon society. The decision to continue with the trial in such cases is founded on the overriding element of public interest in punishing persons for serious offences.

16.7. As distinguished from serious offences, there may be criminal cases which have an overwhelming or predominant element of a civil dispute. They stand on a distinct footing insofar as the exercise of the inherent power to quash is concerned.

16.8. Criminal cases involving offences which arise from commercial, financial, mercantile, partnership or similar transactions with an essentially civil flavour may in appropriate situations fall for quashing where parties have settled the dispute.

16.9. In such a case, the High Court may quash the criminal proceeding if in view of the compromise between the disputants, the possibility of a conviction is remote and the continuation of a criminal proceeding would cause oppression and prejudice; and

16.10. There is yet an exception to the principle set out in propositions 16.8. and 16.9. above. Economic offences involving the financial and economic well-being of the State have implications which lie beyond the domain of a mere dispute between private disputants. The High Court would be justified in declining to quash where the offender is involved in an activity akin to a financial or economic fraud or misdemeanour. The consequences of the act complained of upon the financial or economic system will weigh in the balance.”

(emphasis supplied)

13. The present case relates to an offence under Section 304A of the IPC where a person has died due to alleged negligence of the accused person. Thus, while deciding whether proceedings relating to such an offence can be quashed on the basis of the settlement between the accused and family of the victim, it is necessary to consider whether it is probable that the presented facts would constitute gross negligence and an element of mens rea, which is required for the purpose of conviction.

14. The Hon'ble Apex Court, in the case of Jacob Mathew v. State of Punjab : (2005) 6 SCC 1, while interpreting as to what constitutes a negligent act to constitute an offence under Section 304A of IPC held that gross negligence and an element of mens rea must be shown to exist. The Hon'ble Apex Court observed as under:

“48. We sum up our conclusions as under: ...(5) The jurisprudential concept of negligence differs in civil and criminal law. What may be negligence in civil law may not necessarily be negligence in criminal law. For negligence to amount to an offence, the element of mens rea must be shown to exist. For an act to amount to criminal negligence, the degree of negligence should be much higher i.e. gross or of a very high degree. Negligence which is neither gross nor of a higher degree may provide a ground for action in civil law but cannot form the basis for prosecution. The word “gross” has not been used in Section 304A IPC, yet it is settled that in criminal law negligence or recklessness, to be so held, must be of such a high degree as to be “gross”. The expression “rash or negligent act” as occurring in Section 304A of the IPC has to be read as qualified by the word “grossly”...”

15. Admittedly, the deceased, namely, Vinay Prakash Rai (son of Respondent Nos. 2 and 3), expired due to electrocution at the construction site being managed by the petitioner. From the perusal of the FIR and the documents annexed with the present petition, it appears to be a case of an accident. It is not alleged that the petitioner was the one because of whom, the deceased lost his life due to electrocution by the exposed wire. It is not the case of the prosecution that the accused person had shown criminal negligence due to which the alleged accident took place. It is also not the case of the prosecution that such accidents happened on a regular basis and that other workers also got injured for the same reason.

16. The present accident seems to be one of the incidents for which the conviction of the petitioner does not appear to be probable, given the fact that the complainant and other family members of the deceased have already settled with the petitioner. The Court, thus, is of the view that the payment of compensation would serve the ends of justice.

17. The legal representatives of the deceased have already agreed to settle and have received the agreed compensation.

18. Keeping in view the nature of dispute and that the parties have amicably entered into a settlement, this Court feels that no useful purpose would be served by keeping the dispute alive and continuance of the proceedings would amount to abuse of the process of Court. I am of the opinion that this is a fit case to exercise discretionary jurisdiction under Section 482 of the CrPC.

19. However, keeping in mind the fact that the charge sheet has already been filed and the State machinery has been put to motion, ends of justice would be served if the petitioner is put to cost.

20. In view of the above, FIR No. 471/2017 and all consequential proceedings arising therefrom are quashed, subject to payment of the total cost of ₹10,000/- by the petitioner, to be deposited with the Delhi Police Welfare Society within a period of eight weeks from the date.

21. Let the proof of payment of cost be submitted with the concerned SHO.

22. The present petition is allowed in the aforesaid terms.
