important event in the life of any father. Apart from this, it is the submission on perusal of evidence on records indicates that the applicant is not said to have held any weapon or assaulted any witness in the incident in question, except there is evidence of one witness wherein it is claimed that she was pushed by the appellant / applicant. According to him, applicant was on bail during trial and the fact that he attended the trial indicates no possibility to flee from justice.

This Court at this stage does not wish to go into the merits of the case and to record any observations as there are other applications pending of the co-accused for suspension of sentence and enlargement on bail.
