3. The learned counsel appearing for the petitioner submitted that the petitioner is the owner of the lorry and what was carried was only M-sand and not river sand and a false case has been foisted against the petitioner.

4. The learned Government Advocate (Criminal Side) submitted that by misusing the permit given for carrying M-sand, 6 units of river sand was carried in the vehicle.

5. Taking into consideration the facts and circumstances of the case and taking note of the specific stand that has been taken by both sides and also considering the quantity of sand that is involved in this case, this Court is not inclined to grant anticipatory bail for the present. The picture will get more clearer after the respondent police gets the test report which will clearly establish as to whether M-sand was carried in the vehicle or river sand was carried.

6. In view of the above, this criminal original petition is dismissed for the present.
