2. According to the petitioner, a survey was already conducted and boundary stones were laid. However, the fifth respondent, with the help of his relatives, removed the boundary stones, thereby, creating problems. A criminal complaint was also lodged with the Police alleging trespass and removal of the boundary stones that were laid after conducting the survey. Since the boundary stones were removed, the petitioner filed another application by paying the requisite fee for conducting a fresh survey.

3. It is for the Police authorities to act upon the alleged criminal acts, including trespass. If the boundary stones fixed by the officials were removed, the same would constitute a criminal offence and has to be duly inquired into and investigated.

4. However, since there is no dispute with regard to the ownership of the land belonging to the petitioner and a Patta has already been issued, the prayer of the petitioner can be acceded to, considering the peculiar facts of the present case. Accordingly, there shall be a direction to the respondents 1 and 2 to conduct a survey and lay boundary stones after considering the claims of the petitioner as
