6. Reply to the petition has been filed by the respondent wherein not only the allegations contained in the petition have been specifically and categorically denied, but also it has been reiterated that the proceedings have been taken up in the right earnest and strictly in accordance with law. While claiming that the firm of the petitioner is a non existing firm, doing no business, it has been alleged by the respondents that fake documents have been created by the petitioner to claim 'Inward Tax Credit' ('ITC' in short) by defrauding the respondents.

7. Heard.

8. It has been argued by learned counsel for the petitioner that filing of FIR for the commission of offence punishable under Section 11 of CST Act and under Sections 420, 467, 468 and 471 of IPC, is purely an abuse of process of law. As per learned counsel for the petitioner, since under the GST Act the above mentioned Act has been defined as an offence under Section 132(1)(b), any action under general law cannot be initiated. It has been further contended by learned counsel for the petitioner that the FIR in question has been lodged with mala fide intentions just for harass the petitioner, and that instead of taking action as per provisions of GST Act, which a complete Code in itself, the FIR under Sections 420, 467m 468 and 471 of IPC has been lodged. While referring to the principles of law laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India in the case of State of Haryana Vs. Bhajan Lal, 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, the learned counsel for the petitioner has sought for quashing of present FIR.

9. In addition to above, the learned counsel for the petitioner has also argued that the term "Complete Code" has been discussed by the Hon'ble

Supreme Court in the case of Girnar Traders (3) Vs. State of Maharashtra (2011), 3 SCC 1 wherein it has been observed that "Complete" further adds a degree of certainty to the code. It has to be a compilation of provisions which would comprehensively deal with various aspects of the purpose sought legislations is either absent or at best is minimal. The provisions of the enactment in question should provide for a complete machinery to deal with various problems that may arise during its execution. Sufficient powers should be vested in the authority/forum created under the Act to ensure effectual and complete implementation of the Act. There should be complete and coherent scheme of the statutory provisions for attainment of the object and purpose of the Act. It essentially should also provide for adjudicatory scheme to deal with grievances/claims of the persons affected by enforcement of the provisions of the Act, preferably, including an appellate forum within the framework of the Act. In other words, the Act in itself should be a panacea to all facets arising from the implementation of the Act itself.

10. It has been further argued on behalf of the petitioner that CGST Act 2017 which is a complete code, prescribes the procedure for prosecution, and punishment upon conviction, with regard to the acts attributed to the petitioner, and that it further prescribes the cancellation of registration under GST Act, if the firm is found to be non-operating from its registered premises. As per learned counsel for the petitioner since the contents of FIR reveals that one of the allegation against the petitioner is that he is not operating from its registered premises, the only action which can be taken against the petitioner is the cancellation of registration of the firm of petitioner, and not the prosecution under general provisions of law.

11. The learned counsel for the petitioner has further argued that in the present case the mandatory procedure enshrined under Section 74 of CGST Act 2017, read with Rule 142 of CGST Rule 2017, has not been followed and that the above mentioned provisions prescribed that if an officer arrives at a conclusion that input tax credit (ITC) has been wrongly availed, he must communicate the same to the alleged defaulter, give an opportunity to pay tax/interest/penalty and if the alleged defaulter does not pay the same then issue a show cause notice, and give an opportunity to file representation. According to learned counsel for the petitioner the above mentioned mandatory provisions have not been followed in the present case, and therefore, for want of above mentioned compliances, the FIR at the instance of Excise and Taxation Officer is not sustainable.

12. While referring to the clause 132(1)(b) of CGST Act read with clause 132, the learned counsel for the petitioner has argued that the above mentioned statute provides the procedure in case of evasion of tax on account of invoice/bill without supply of goods, and therefore, instead of filing the FIR, the above mentioned procedure should have been followed by the Excise and Taxation Authority. In support of above mentioned arguments the learned counsel for the petitioner has referred to the principles of law laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India in the case of Jeewan Kumar Raut Vs. CBI, (2009), 7 SCC 526, wherein it has been held that 'where a statute empowers an authority to investigate a matter, cognizance of such offence must not be taken under the Criminal Procedure Code'.

13. The learned counsel for the petitioner has also referred to the principles of law laid down by this Court in the case of Ajay Kumar Sandhu Vs. State of Haryana, 2015 SCC Online P&H 16972, wherein it has been held that “the Finance Act 1994”, being a Special and Complete Code prevails over general provisions of IPC, and accordingly, for alleged non-payment of service tax, department cannot file an FIR under the provisions of IPC. While referring to the principles of law laid down by the Hon’ble Supreme Court of India in the case of Union of India Vs. Ashok Kumar Sharma and other, 2020 SCC Online SC 683, the learned counsel for the petitioner has further contended that in the above mentioned case Hon’ble Apex Court while upholding the Allahabad High Court judgment, whereby the FIR was quashed with respect to an offence registered under Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940, held that Police Officers cannot register FIR, arrest, prosecute or investigate in regard to cognizable offence under Chapter IV of the Drugs and Cosmetics Act, as the latter is a complete Code in itself.

14. The learned counsel for the petitioner has also contended that the FIR in question has been lodged for the commission of offence punishable under Sections 420, 467, 468 and 471 of IPC, and that one of the essential ingredient of above mentioned offence is the fraudulent and dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation. According to learned counsel for the petitioner in the present case there are no such allegations, and therefore, in view of the law laid down by the Hon’ble Supreme Court in the case of V.Y. Jose Vs. State of Gujarat (2009) 3 SCC 78, the above mentioned FIR is not sustainable.

15. In support of his above arguments, the learned counsel for the petitioner has referred to the principles of law laid down by the Hon’ble Supreme Court of India in the case of Rekha Jain Vs. State of Karnataka, 2022 SCC Online SC 585, wherein it has been held that to make out a case against a person for the offence under Section 420 IPC there must be a dishonest inducement to deceive a person to deliver any property to any other person. According to learned counsel for the petitioner, in the present case, there is no allegation at all against the accused - 'Bhagwati traders', of any inducement by it to deceive and deliver the goods. As per learned counsel for the petitioner, considering the allegations in the FIR/complaint as they are, and in the absence of any allegation of dishonest inducement by 'M/s Bhagwati Traders' through its proprietor Sh. Vishal, it cannot be said that the Petitioner firm has committed any offence under Section 420 of IPC.

16. In view of above mentioned contention the learned counsel for the petitioner has argued that the present case is a perfect case wherein the principles of law laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case State of Haryana Vs. Bhajan Lal, 1992 SCC (Cri) 426, should be followed and while holding that the filing of FIR against the petitioner is nothing but an abuse of process of law, the above mentioned FIR should be quashed.

17. Per contra, it has been argued by learned State counsel that the present case is not a case wherein at its own level the FIR has been lodged by the police. According to learned State counsel, in fact, in the present case, it was the Tax Authority, i.e. the Excise and Taxation Officer, who approached the police and requested for filing of FIR in view of the fraudulent acts committed by the petitioner. While defending the action taken by the Police authority it has been argued by learned State counsel that once the complaint has been moved by tax authority, the filing of FIR for a cognizable offence by the police is in accordance with law, and there is no such bar that in such a case the FIR cannot be lodged.

18. The learned State counsel while referring to the contents of complaint has argued that it was reported by the tax authority that the petitioner was running a non-existent firm just for the purpose of creating document to avail the facility of 'Input Tax Credit', and that, in fact, no business was being run by the petitioner. According to learned State counsel for drawing the benefit of 'Inward Tax Credit' the documents were forged and fabricated by the petitioner and therefore, for the acts of creating false documents, the petitioner can be prosecuted under the general provisions of Indian Penal Code.

19. In the alternative the learned State counsel has argued that for the sake of arguments even if it is accepted that the petitioner cannot be prosecuted for the offence under Sections IPC, he can be prosecuted under GST Act, as the abovementioned offence is cognizable and non-bailable. In this regard, the learned State counsel has pointed out that the total tax liability as detailed in the complaint comes out to be Rs.7,34,92,693/-. In view of above discussed figures it has also been contended by learned State counsel that Section 132(1) (b) read with Section 132(1)(i) makes it abundantly clear that the offence allegedly committed by the petitioner is a cognizable offence, and therefore, filing of FIR by the police at the instance of Taxation authority cannot be held to be illegal.

20. The record has been perused carefully.

21. As far as the present petition is concerned, the facts and circumstances of the present case, the grounds taken by the petitioner for quashing of FIR and the reply submitted by the State, makes it abundantly clear that the points which need determination in the present case is:-

Whether at this stage the FIR lodged against the petitioner is liable to be quashed.

As far as the above mentioned point of determination is concerned there are two relevant aspects which are necessary to be taken into consideration.

Firstly, whether on the basis of allegations contained in the FIR any cognizable offence is made out, if yes, under what provisions; and secondly, whether it will serve the ends of justice if by taking into consideration the plea raised by the petitioner, the FIR is quashed at this stage.

22. As far as the first component is concerned the contents of the FIR shows that the allegations against the petitioner are that he sought GST number but without doing any business he has been issuing invoices, and thereby claiming the benefit of 'Input Tax Credit'.

23. With regard to the above mentioned allegations Section 132(1) (b) of the Central Goods and Service Tax Act 2017 is relevant. It provides that issuing any invoice or bill without supply of goods or service or both in violation of the provisions of this Act, or the rules made thereunder leading to wrongful availment or utilisation of 'Input Tax Credit' or refund of tax is an offence.

Sections 132(1)(i) further provides that whosoever commits, or causes to commit and retain the benefit arising out of above mentioned offence shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to 5 years and with fine, if the tax evaded or the amount of 'Input Tax Credit' wrongly availed or utilized or the amount of refund wrongly taken, exceeds Rs.5,00,00,000/-.

It is also relevant to mention here that Section 132(5) provides that the offence defined under Section 132(1)(b) and punishable under Sections 32(1)(i) shall be cognizable and non-bailable.

24. In the light to above mentioned special statute now it has to be determined as to whether in view of allegations levelled by the complainant against petitioner-accused, the offence under Section 132(1)(b) is made out against the petitioner or the offence under Section 420, 467, 468 and 471 IPC.

25. With regard to above, the thin line which can be a defining factor is the manner in which the GST number was obtained by the petitioner, and also act and conduct of the petitioner while performing the business. If the GST number has been obtained with the help of forged documents or with an intention to commit cheating with the department, and right from the very beginning not even a single valid transaction with regard to trade/business was performed by the petitioner, then definitely there is a very strong chance that the above mentioned act and conduct of the petitioner may fall within the ambit of cheating/forgery, defined under Indian Penal Code. On the other hand if the petitioner has been doing business in usual course and during the course of business there were certain transactions which had not actually taken place, then the petitioner may be treated to be a bona fide trader who with regard to certain limited transactions committed the offence under Section 132(1)(b) of the GST.

26. In order to determine above mentioned distinction the proper course available to the petitioner is to approach the learned trial Court and raised the plea taken by him at the time of defending himself. Since the learned trial Court is having an opportunity to look into the contents of final report submitted by the police along with evidence collected during the course of investigation, and also the evidence led during trial, only trial Court will be in a position to take a decision as to whether the offence allegedly committed by the petitioner comes within the purview of Section 420, 467, 468 and 471 of IPC or under Section 132(1)(b) of GST.

27. If the offence allegedly committed by the petitioner comes within the purview of Section 32(1)(b) of GST Act the principles of law laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India in the case of Ashok Kumar Shamra (supra) are also applicable wherein the Hon'ble Supreme Court upheld the verdict of Allahabad High Court whereby the FIR registered by the Police under the provisions of Drug and Cosmetic Act was quashed.

28. With regard to facts and circumstances of the present case one of the most relevant and important aspect to be taken into consideration is that in the present case the investigation already stands completed, and the final report under Section 173 Cr.P.C. (challan) has already been filed before the learned trial Court. In view of above mentioned report the learned trial Court has not only taken cognizance against the petitioner, but also the charge has been framed against the petitioner. The case is now fixed for prosecution evidence before the learned trial Court. There is nothing on record to show that at the time of framing of charge the petitioner raised any objections commensurate to the grounds taken in the present petition, and thus, the order with regard to framing of charge, which has not been challenged, has become final.

29. As far as the quashing of FIR is concerned the scope for quashing of FIR is limited as in the quashing petition this court does not have the advantage of looking into the evidence collected by the Investigating Agency.

30. In this regard the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India in the case of rendered in Criminal Appeal No.330 of 2021, has prescribed the guidelines wherein the FIR can be quashed. Those guidelines are as under:

- “i) Police has the statutory right and duty under the relevant provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure contained in Chapter XIV of the Code to investigate into a cognizable offence;
- ii) Courts would not thwart any investigation into the cognizable offences;
- iii) It is only in cases where no cognizable offence or offence of any kind is disclosed in the first information report that the Court will not permit an investigation to go on;
- iv) The power of quashing should be exercised sparingly with circumspection, as it has been observed, in the ‘rarest of rare cases (not to be confused with the formation in the context of death penalty).
- v) While examining an FIR/complaint, quashing of which is sought, the court cannot embark upon an enquiry as to the reliability or genuineness or otherwise of the allegations made in the FIR/complaint;
- vi) Criminal proceedings ought not to be scuttled at the initial stage;
- vii) Quashing of a complaint/FIR should be an exception rather than an ordinary rule;
- viii) Ordinarily, the courts are barred from usurping the jurisdiction of the police, since the two organs of the State operate in two specific spheres of activities and one ought not to tread over the other sphere;

- ix) The functions of the judiciary and the police are complementary, not overlapping;
- x) Save in exceptional cases where non-interference would result in miscarriage of justice, the Court and the judicial process should not interfere at the stage of investigation of offences;
- xi) Extraordinary and inherent powers of the Court do not confer an arbitrary jurisdiction on the Court to act according to its whims or caprice;
- xii) The first information report is not an encyclopedia which must disclose all facts and details relating to the offence reported. Therefore, when the investigation by the police is in progress, the court should not go into the merits of the allegations in the FIR. Police must be permitted to complete the investigation. It would be premature to pronounce the conclusion based on hazy facts that the complaint/FIR does not deserve to be investigated or that it amounts to abuse of process of law. After investigation, if the investigating officer finds that there is no substance in the application made by the complainant, the investigating officer may file an appropriate report/summary before the learned Magistrate which may be considered by the learned Magistrate in accordance with the known procedure;
- xiii) The power under Section 482 Cr.P.C. is very wide, but conferment of wide power requires the court to be more cautious. It casts an onerous and more diligent duty on the court;

- xiv) However, at the same time, the court, if it thinks fit, regard being had to the parameters of quashing and the self-restraint imposed by law, more particularly the parameters laid down by this Court in the cases of R.P. Kapur (supra) and Bhajan Lal (supra), has the jurisdiction to quash the FIR/complaint;
- xv) When a prayer for quashing the FIR is made by the alleged accused and the court when it exercises the power under Section 482 Cr.P.C., only has to consider whether the allegations in the FIR disclose commission of a cognizable offence or not. The court is not required to consider on merits whether or not the merits of the allegations make out a cognizable offence and the court has to permit the investigating agency/police to investigate the allegations in the FIR;
- xvi) The aforesaid parameters would be applicable and/or the aforesaid aspects are required to be considered by the High Court while passing an interim order in a quashing petition in exercise of powers under Section 482 Cr.P.C. and/or under Article 226 of the Constitution of India. However, an interim order of stay of investigation during the pendency of the quashing petition can be passed with circumspection. Such an interim order should not require to be passed routinely, casually and/or mechanically. Normally, when the investigation is in progress and the facts are hazy and the entire evidence/material is not before the High Court, the High Court should restrain itself from passing the interim order of not to arrest or “no coercive steps to be adopted” and the accused should be relegated to apply for anticipatory bail under Section 438 Cr.P.C. before the competent court. The High Court shall not and as such is not justified in passing the order of not to arrest and/or “no coercive steps” either during the investigation or till the investigation is completed and/or till the final report/chargesheet is filed under Section 173 Cr.P.C., while dismissing/disposing of the quashing petition under Section 482 Cr.P.C. and/or under Article 226 of the Constitution of India; xvii) Even in a case where the High Court is prima facie of the opinion that an exceptional case is made out for grant of interim stay of further investigation, after considering the broad parameters while exercising the powers under Section 482 Cr.P.C. and/or under Article 226 of the Constitution of India referred to hereinabove, the High Court has to give brief reasons why such an interim order is warranted and/or is required to be passed so that it can demonstrate the application of mind by the Court and the higher forum can consider what was weighed with the High Court while passing such an interim order.

xviii) Whenever an interim order is passed by the High Court of “no coercive steps to be adopted” within the aforesaid parameters, the High Court must clarify what does it mean by “no coercive steps to be adopted” as the term “no coercive steps to be adopted” can be said to be too vague and/or broad which can be misunderstood and/or misapplied.”

31. Similarly in the case of Sadiq B. Hanchinmani Vs. State of Karnataka, Criminal Appeal No.4728 of 2025, the Hon’ble Supreme Court of India has ruled that police investigation should be allowed to proceed unless exceptional circumstances warrant intervention. According to Hon’ble Supreme Court of India the High Court should not interfere with the investigation when allegations in FIR disclose cognizable offences.

32. In the case of M/s Balaji Traders Vs. The State of U.P. & Anr. 2025(3) RCR (Criminal) 175, the Hon’ble Supreme Court of India has ruled that jurisdiction of quashing of FIR should be exercised sparingly in the ‘rarest of rare cases’. As per Hon’ble Supreme Court of India allegations in FIR or complaint must be taken at face value and accepted in their entirety to assess whether they disclose a cognizable offence.

33. In the case of Muskan Vs. Ishaan Khan (Sataniya) Criminal Appeal No.4752 of 2025, the Hon’ble Supreme Court of India held that the Court should not conduct a mini-trial at the stage of quashing and that quashing of FIR should be an exception and exercised sparingly in rarest of rare cases. The Hon’ble Supreme Court of India has further held that Courts cannot embark upon an enquiry as to the reliability or genuineness of allegations made in the FIR/complaint.

34. If the facts and circumstances of present case are analysed in the light of above mentioned guiding principles, it leads to the conclusion that, at this stage, when it is not possible to decipher as to whether the allegations against the petitioner comes within purview of Sections 420, 467, 468 and 174

IPC or Section 132 of GST any firm opinion cannot be rendered, as to whether the plea taken by the petitioner that FIR cannot be filed, and the same deserves to be quashed, is devoid of merit. Hence, finding no merit in this petition at this stage, the same is hereby dismissed. However, the petitioner shall be at liberty to take all the pleas which have been taken in this quashing petition before the learned trial Court at appropriate stage.
