1. The present petition is filed seeking quashing of FIR No. 422/2018 dated 24.09.2018, registered at Police Station Ambedkar Nagar, for the offences under Sections 363 of the Indian Penal Code, 1860 ('IPC'), including the proceedings emanating therefrom. Chargesheet in the present case has been filed under Sections 363/376/344 of the IPC and Section 6 of the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences Act, 2012 ('POCSO').

2. The FIR was registered pursuant to a complaint made by the father of the victim, who was about 15 years old at the time, alleging that on 18.09.2018 his daughter had left the house for some work, whereafter she did not return home. It was stated that efforts were made to find the victim but to no avail.

3. It is stated that on 17.09.2019, the victim along with her mother came to the police station, whereafter she was medically examined. The victim stated that she had been kidnapped by her neighbour/ the petitioner in the present case, on 17.09.2018. It is alleged that the petitioner sexually assaulted her multiple times after giving her sedatives mixed in her food. She stated that the last incident of sexual assault took place on 11.09.2019, whereafter the petitioner returned home on 15.09.2019.

4. The present petition is filed on the ground that the parties have amicably settled all the disputes, on their own free will, without any undue influence or duress. The petitioner and Respondent No. 2/ victim have since got married and are happily staying together.

5. The learned counsel for the petitioner submits that Respondent No. 2 was in a romantic relationship with the petitioner.

6. The petitioner and Respondent No. 2 are present in person before this Court and have been duly identified by the Investigating Officer.

7. Respondent No. 2 on being asked, states that she was in a consensual relationship with the petitioner and that with the consent of all the family members, the petitioner and Respondent No. 2 have since married and are happily residing together. She states that the allegations were made pursuant to the advice received at that stage and that she does not wish to pursue any proceedings as the same would affect the married life of the petitioner and Respondent No. 2.

8. She states that even though allegations were made that in the year 2019 that the petitioner had established forceful physical relations with her, however, the said fact was incorrect. She states that consensual physical relations were established only after the parties had attained the age of majority.

9. She further states that while the relationship was consensual in nature, however, at one instance, when she doubted the intentions of the petitioner, a complaint was given in that regard. She submits that she has since married the petitioner and wants to live happily with him. She consequently prays that the proceedings emanating from the FIR be quashed.

10. Offence under Section 344 of the IPC is compoundable and offences under Section 363/376 of the IPC and Section 6 of the POCSO Act are non-compoundable.

11. It is well settled that the High Court while exercising its powers under Section 528 of the Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita, 2023 ('BNSS') (erstwhile Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973) can compound offences which are non-compoundable on the ground that there is a compromise between the accused and the complainant. The Hon'ble Apex Court has laid down parameters and guidelines for High Court while accepting settlement and quashing the proceedings.

12. In Narinder Singh & Ors. v. State of Punjab & Anr. : (2014) 6 SCC 466, the Hon'ble Apex Court has observed as under :-

“29. In view of the aforesaid discussion, we sum up and lay down the following principles by which the High Court would be guided in giving adequate treatment to the settlement between the parties and exercising its power under Section 482 of the Code while accepting the settlement and quashing the proceedings or refusing to accept the settlement with direction to continue with the criminal proceedings:

29.1. Power conferred under Section 482 of the Code is to be distinguished from the power which lies in the Court to compound the offences under Section 320 of the Code. No doubt, under Section 482 of the Code, the High Court has inherent power to quash the criminal proceedings even in those cases which are not compoundable, where the parties have settled the matter between themselves. However, this power is to be exercised sparingly and with caution.

29.2. When the parties have reached the settlement and on that basis petition for quashing the criminal proceedings is filed, the guiding factor in such cases would be to secure:

- (i) ends of justice, or
- (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of any court.

While exercising the power the High Court is to form an opinion on either of the aforesaid two objectives.

29.3. Such a power is not to be exercised in those prosecutions which involve heinous and serious offences of mental depravity or offences like murder, rape, dacoity, etc. Such offences are not private in nature and have a serious impact on society. Similarly, for the offences alleged to have been committed under special statute like the Prevention of Corruption Act or the offences committed by public servants while working in that capacity are not to be quashed merely on the basis of compromise between the victim and the offender.

29.4. On the other hand, those criminal cases having overwhelmingly and predominantly civil character, particularly those arising out of commercial transactions or arising out of matrimonial relationship or family disputes should be quashed when the parties have resolved their entire disputes among themselves.

29.5. While exercising its powers, the High Court is to examine as to whether the possibility of conviction is remote and bleak and continuation of criminal cases would put the accused to great oppression and prejudice and extreme injustice would be caused to him by not quashing the criminal cases.”

13. Similarly, in Parbatbhai Aahir & Ors v. State of Gujarat & Anr. : (2017) 9 SCC 641, the Hon’ble Apex Court has observed as under :-

“16. The broad principles which emerge from the precedents on the subject, may be summarised in the following propositions:

16.1. Section 482 preserves the inherent powers of the High Court to prevent an abuse of the process of any court or to secure the ends of justice. The provision does not confer new powers. It only recognises and preserves powers which inhere in the High Court.

16.2. The invocation of the jurisdiction of the High Court to quash a first information report or a criminal proceeding on the ground that a settlement has been arrived at between the offender and the victim is not the same as the invocation of jurisdiction for the purpose of compounding an offence. While compounding an offence, the power of the court is governed by the provisions of Section 320 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. The power to quash under Section 482 is attracted even if the offence is non-compoundable.

16.3. In forming an opinion whether a criminal proceeding or complaint should be quashed in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482, the High Court must evaluate whether the ends of justice would justify the exercise of the inherent power.

16.4. While the inherent power of the High Court has a wide ambit and plenitude it has to be exercised (i) to secure the ends of justice, or (ii) to prevent an abuse of the process of any court.

16.5. The decision as to whether a complaint or first information report should be quashed on the ground that the offender and victim have settled the dispute, revolves ultimately on the facts and circumstances of each case and no exhaustive elaboration of principles can be formulated.

16.6. In the exercise of the power under Section 482 and while dealing with a plea that the dispute has been settled, the High Court must have due regard to the nature and gravity of the offence. Heinous and serious offences involving mental depravity or offences such as murder, rape and dacoity cannot appropriately be quashed though the victim or the family of the victim have settled the dispute. Such offences are, truly speaking, not private in nature but have a serious impact upon society. The decision to continue with the trial in such cases is founded on the overriding element of public interest in punishing persons for serious offences.

16.7. As distinguished from serious offences, there may be criminal cases which have an overwhelming or predominant element of a civil dispute. They stand on a distinct footing insofar as the exercise of the inherent power to quash is concerned.

16.8. Criminal cases involving offences which arise from commercial, financial, mercantile, partnership or similar transactions with an essentially civil flavour may in appropriate situations fall for quashing where parties have settled the dispute.

16.9. In such a case, the High Court may quash the criminal proceeding if in view of the compromise between the disputants, the possibility of a conviction is remote and the continuation of a criminal proceeding would cause oppression and prejudice; and

16.10. There is yet an exception to the principle set out in propositions 16.8. and 16.9. above. Economic offences involving the financial and economic well-being of the State have implications which lie beyond the domain of a mere dispute between private disputants. The High Court would be justified in declining to quash where the offender is involved in an activity akin to a financial or economic fraud or misdemeanour. The consequences of the act complained of upon the financial or economic system will weigh in the balance.”

(emphasis supplied)

14. The Hon’ble Apex Court, in Kapil Gupta: 2022 SCC Online SC 1030, while quashing an FIR under Section 376 of the IPC, had observed as under:

“12. It can thus be seen that this Court has clearly held that though the Court should be slow in quashing the proceedings wherein heinous and serious offences are involved, the High Court is not foreclosed from examining as to whether there exists material for incorporation of such an offence or as to whether there is sufficient evidence which if proved would lead to proving the charge for the offence charged with. The Court has also to take into consideration as to whether the settlement between the parties is going to result into harmony between them which may improve their mutual relationship.

X-X-X

15. In both the cases, though the charge-sheets have been filed, the charges are yet to be framed and as such, the trial has not yet commenced. It is further to be noted that since Respondent 2 herself is not supporting the prosecution case, even if the criminal trial is permitted to go ahead, it will end in nothing else than an acquittal. If the request of the parties is denied, it will be amounting to only adding one more criminal case to the already overburdened criminal courts.”

(emphasis supplied)

15. It is not in doubt that the offences under Sections 376 of the IPC and Section 6 of the POCSO Act are heinous in nature and involve mental depravity. Offences of such nature cannot be quashed merely because the victim has settled the dispute. Such offences, in true sense, cannot be said to be offences in personam as the same are crimes against the society.

16. The present case, however, seems to have arisen due to a misunderstanding. The victim/Respondent No. 2 has categorically stated that the complaint was given pursuant to the advice received at that stage and that the petitioner and herself are now happily married.

17. Many a time, this Court is faced with instances wherein the accused marries the victim in order to evade conviction. In the present case, however, Respondent No. 2 states that the allegations made by her against the petitioner were incorrect and were only made on the basis of the advice received at that stage. It has categorically been stated that Respondent No. 2 was in a consensual relationship with the petitioner and that she is now happily married to the petitioner. Under these circumstances, allowing the criminal trial to proceed would cause undue harassment and heartburn to the parties.

18. Keeping in view the facts of the case, and that the petitioner and Respondent No. 2 are now happily married, this Court feels that no useful purpose will be served by keeping the dispute alive and continuance of the proceedings would amount to abuse of the process of Court. The parties have a long life ahead. Thus, a humanitarian approach is required to be taken in such peculiar facts. I am of the considered opinion that this is a fit case to exercise extraordinary discretionary jurisdiction under Section 528 of BNSS.

19. In view of the above, FIR No. 422/2018 and all consequential proceedings arising therefrom are quashed.

20. The present petition is allowed in the aforesaid terms.
