ORDER
24.09.2025

1. The present petition is filed under Section 482 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 ('CrPC') seeking quashing of FIR No. 136/2017 dated 23.08.2017, for the offence under Sections 103/104 of the Trade Marks Act, 1999 ('TM Act') and Section 63 of the Copyright Act, 1957 ('Copyright Act'), registered at Police Station Economic Offences Wing, including all consequential proceedings emanating therefrom.
 2. Chargesheet has been filed in the present case under Sections 103/104 of the TM Act and Section 63 of the Copyright Act.
 3. The FIR was registered pursuant to a complaint given by

Mr. Amit Goel, who is stated to be the authorised representative of Sony Corporation (hereafter 'complainant company'). The complainant company is the registered proprietor of the trademark "SONY".

4. The brief facts are that the complainant company is in the business of manufacturing various electrical equipment including speakers. The complainant company filed a complaint under section 200 of the CrPC before the learned Magistrate, alleging that some unknown persons were illegally selling counterfeit speakers under the registered trademarks of the complainant company. It was further alleged that the same was causing severe losses to the complainant company in terms of money, goodwill and reputation.

5. The complainant company thereafter submitted the details of the present petitioners before the learned Magistrate as the persons who are allegedly selling counterfeit products under the registered trademark of the complainant company.

6. It is alleged that during the course of investigation, the petitioners were found in possession of the alleged counterfeit speakers bearing a falsified trademark of the complainant company.

7. The learned counsel for the petitioners submits that the parties, with the intervention of Delhi Mediation Centre, Tis Hazari Courts, have settled their disputes. He submits that as per the settlement dated 13.06.2025, the entire settlement amount of ₹3,90,000/- has been paid by the petitioners to the complainant company.

8. The parties are present in person and have been duly identified by the Investigating Officer.

9. Mr. Amit Goel who is the Authorised Representative of the complainant states that all disputes have been resolved and the company does not wish to pursue any proceedings arising out of the present FIR and has no objection if the same is quashed.

10. The petitioners state that undertakings have also been filed pursuant to the settlement arrived between the parties and the same shall be duly complied with.

11. Offences under Section 63 of the Copyright Act and Sections 103/104 of the TM Act are not compoundable.

12. It is well settled that the High Court while exercising its powers under Section 482 of the CrPC can compound offences which are non-compoundable under the Code on the ground that there is a compromise between the accused and the complainant. The Hon'ble Apex Court has laid down parameters and guidelines for High Court while accepting settlement and quashing the proceedings. In Narinder Singh & Ors. v. State of Punjab & Anr. : (2014) 6 SCC 466, the Hon'ble Apex Court has observed as under :-

“29. In view of the aforesaid discussion, we sum up and lay down the following principles by which the High Court would be guided in giving adequate treatment to the settlement between the parties and exercising its power under Section 482 of the Code while accepting the settlement and quashing the proceedings or refusing to accept the settlement with direction to continue with the criminal proceedings:

29.1. Power conferred under Section 482 of the Code is to be distinguished from the power which lies in the Court to compound the offences under Section 320 of the Code. No doubt, under Section 482 of the Code, the High Court has inherent power to quash the criminal proceedings even in those cases which are not compoundable, where the parties have settled the matter between themselves.

However, this power is to be exercised sparingly and with caution.

29.2. When the parties have reached the settlement and on that basis petition for quashing the criminal proceedings is filed, the guiding factor in such cases would be to secure:

- (i) ends of justice, or
- (ii) to prevent abuse of the process of any court.

While exercising the power the High Court is to form an opinion on either of the aforesaid two objectives.

29.3. Such a power is not to be exercised in those prosecutions which involve heinous and serious offences of mental depravity or offences like murder, rape, dacoity, etc. Such offences are not private in nature and have a serious impact on society. Similarly, for the offences alleged to have been committed under special statute like the Prevention of Corruption Act or the offences committed by public servants while working in that capacity are not to be quashed merely on the basis of compromise between the victim and the offender.

29.4. On the other hand, those criminal cases having overwhelmingly and predominantly civil character, particularly those arising out of commercial transactions or arising out of matrimonial relationship or family disputes should be quashed when the parties have resolved their entire disputes among themselves.

29.5. While exercising its powers, the High Court is to examine as to whether the possibility of conviction is remote and bleak and continuation of criminal cases would put the accused to great oppression and prejudice and extreme injustice would be caused to him by not quashing the criminal cases.”

13. Similarly, in Parbatbhai Aahir & Ors v. State of Gujarat & Anr.: (2017) 9 SCC 641, the Hon’ble Apex Court has observed as under:-

“16. The broad principles which emerge from the precedents on the subject, may be summarised in the following propositions:

16.1. Section 482 preserves the inherent powers of the High Court to prevent an abuse of the process of any court or to secure the ends of justice. The provision does not confer new powers. It only recognises and preserves powers which inhere in the High Court.

16.2. The invocation of the jurisdiction of the High Court to quash a first information report or a criminal proceeding on the ground that a settlement has been arrived at between the offender and the victim is not the same as the invocation of jurisdiction for the purpose of compounding an offence. While compounding an offence, the power of the court is governed by the provisions of Section 320 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. The power to quash under Section 482 is attracted even if the offence is non-compoundable.

16.3. In forming an opinion whether a criminal proceeding or complaint should be quashed in exercise of its jurisdiction under Section 482, the High Court must evaluate whether the ends of justice would justify the exercise of the inherent power.

16.4. While the inherent power of the High Court has a wide ambit and plenitude it has to be exercised (i) to secure the ends of justice, or (ii) to prevent an abuse of the process of any court.

16.5. The decision as to whether a complaint or first information report should be quashed on the ground that the offender and victim have settled the dispute, revolves ultimately on the facts and circumstances of each case and no exhaustive elaboration of principles can be formulated.

*16.6. In the exercise of the power under Section 482 and while dealing with a plea that the dispute has been settled, the High Court must have due regard to the nature and gravity of the offence. Heinous and serious offences involving mental depravity or offences such as murder, rape and dacoity cannot appropriately be quashed though the victim or the family of the victim have settled the dispute. Such offences are, truly speaking, not private in nature but have a serious impact upon society. The decision to continue with the trial in such cases is founded on the overriding element of public interest in punishing persons for serious offences.

16.7. As distinguished from serious offences, there may be criminal cases which have an overwhelming or predominant element of a civil dispute. They stand on a distinct footing insofar as the exercise of the inherent power to quash is concerned.

16.8. Criminal cases involving offences which arise from commercial, financial, mercantile, partnership or similar transactions with an essentially civil flavour may in appropriate situations fall for quashing where parties have settled the dispute.

16.9. In such a case, the High Court may quash the criminal proceeding if in view of the compromise between the disputants, the possibility of a conviction is remote and the continuation of a criminal proceeding would cause oppression and prejudice; and

16.10. There is yet an exception to the principle set out in propositions 16.8. and 16.9. above. Economic offences involving the financial and economic well-being of the State have implications which lie beyond the domain of a mere dispute between private disputants. The High Court would be justified in declining to quash where the offender is involved in an activity akin to a financial or economic fraud or misdemeanour. The consequences of the act complained of upon the financial or economic system will weigh in the balance.”

(emphasis supplied)

14. Keeping in view the aforesaid principle and the nature of dispute and the fact that the parties have amicably entered into a settlement, this Court feels that no useful purpose would be served by keeping the dispute alive and continuation of the proceedings would be an abuse of process of law. In the opinion of the Court, it is a fit case where discretionary jurisdiction under Section 482 of the CrPC can be exercised and the proceedings are quashed.

15. However, considering the fact that the chargesheet has been filed and State Machinery was put into motion, ends of justice would be met, if the petitioner is put to cost.

16. In view of the above, FIR No. 136/2017 and all consequential proceedings arising therefrom are quashed, subject to payment of a cost of ₹10,000/- by the petitioners, to be deposited with the Delhi Police Welfare Society, within a period of ten weeks from date.

17. The present petition is allowed in the aforesaid terms. Pending application(s) also stand disposed of.
