3. Allegedly, on the fateful night of 07.03.2026, the informant went home after locking her grocery shop. However, when she returned to the shop on 10.03.2026, she found the lock broken and discovered that valuables and other articles kept therein had been stolen by some unknown miscreant.

is further submitted that, during the course of investigation, one Jitendra Kumar was apprehended, and, pursuant to his statement, some of the stolen articles were recovered. The said co-accused also allegedly disclosed the name of the petitioner as one of his accomplices. It is contended that the confession allegedly made by the co-accused before the police is inadmissible in evidence. Learned Advocate further submits that the petitioner has been falsely implicated on account of one criminal antecedent, as disclosed in paragraph No.3 of the bail application. The petitioner undertakes that he will fully cooperate in the proceedings of the Court.

5. On the other hand, learned Advocate for the State vehemently opposed the bail application.

6. Having considered the rival submissions advanced by learned Advocates for the respective parties and taking note of the fact that, save and except the alleged confession of the apprehended co-accused, there is no other incriminating material suggesting the complicity of the petitioner in the alleged offence and no incriminating article has been recovered from the possession or at the instance of the petitioner; and that
