2. It is the case of the prosecution that the petitioner, along with his mother, induced the de facto complainant and other victims under the guise of a chit scheme, thereby cheated them to the tune of Rs.12,11,000/-.

3. The learned counsel appearing for the petitioner submitted that the petitioner is innocent and that there were business transactions between his mother and the so called de facto complainant and other victims, who have falsely implicated the petitioner. He further submitted that the petitioner's mother has repaid the entire amount to the de facto complainant and other victims.

4. The learned Government Advocate (Crl.Side) appearing for the respondent police submitted that the de facto complainant and other victims lodged a complaint stating that the petitioner, along with his mother, induced them to part with money and cheated them. He further submitted that the trial has already commenced, charges have been framed and the case now stands posted to 20.02.2026 for the examination of LW.1 and the case cannot be interdicted at this stage and if at all, the petitioner has repaid the money to the witnesses, it is for him to produce sufficient proof before
