2. The petitioner sought certain information from the office of the second respondent.

3. The learned Additional Government Pleader appearing for the second respondent submitted that the petitioner may approach the office of the second respondent, verify the documents sought for, and thereafter, copies of the documents required by her would be furnished.

4. At this juncture, the learned counsel for the petitioner submitted that the petitioner and her husband are illiterate and, therefore, she requires the assistance of an educated person.

5. Recording the aforesaid submissions, this Court permits the petitioner to approach the office of the second respondent to verify the documents sought for, and thereafter, obtain copies of the documents required by her. It is also made clear that one person may accompany the petitioner for the purpose of assisting her in going through the documents.
