3. Status report by way of affidavit of Vinod Kumar, PPS, Deputy Superintendent of Police, Police District Khanna, District Ludhiana has been filed by the State, which is taken on record. A copy thereof has been furnished to the learned counsel for the petitioner.

4. As per office report, notice issued to respondent No.2 received back served. However, none has put in appearance on behalf of respondent No.2.

5. Learned counsel for the petitioner submits that the petitioner has been falsely implicated in the instant case on the basis of the statement made by the complainant, wherein she levelled sweeping and omnibus allegations of assault and wrongful confinement. It is submitted that the complainant, aged about 23 years, was residing in a live-in relationship with the husband of the petitioner, which fact is evincible from the affidavits dated 20.01.2026 and 28.01.2026, annexed as Annexures P-1 & P-2, which were duly executed by the complainant. Be that as it may, there is no material on record to corroborate the said allegations or to point towards the complicity of the petitioner. Learned counsel submits that furthermore, the offence under Section 64 of BNS is also not attributable to the petitioner.

6. Per contra, learned State counsel has vehemently opposed the submissions made by the learned counsel for the petitioner and submit that there are specific and serious allegations against the petitioner. Learned State counsel, while placing reliance upon the status report, submits that the petitioner had, in connivance with co-accused, whom she assisted in wrongfully confining the complainant for a substantial period of time, and subjecting her to threats, coercion and physical assault. Learned State counsel further submits that the medical record, including the report of the Radiologist, Civil Hospital, Khanna which showcases pregnancy of the complainant of about 7 weeks and 5 days, further substantiates the seriousness of the allegations. Accordingly, it is submitted that custodial interrogation of the petitioner is warranted to unearth the exact the sequence of events and the extent of the alleged offences.

7. Heard the rival submissions made by learned counsel for the petitioner and learned State Counsel.

8. Before proceeding further, a gainful reference can be made to the observation passed by passed in X vs Arun Kumar CK, Criminal Appeal No.1834/2022, wherein it was held that though necessity of custodial interrogation is one of the considerations, however, the same cannot be made the sole basis to determine whether the grant of anticipatory bail is warranted or not. Relevant portion thereof reads thus:-

“x x x x

In many anticipatory bail matters, we have noticed one common argument being canvassed that no custodial interrogation is required and, therefore, anticipatory bail may be granted. There appears to be a serious misconception of law that if no case for custodial interrogation is made out by the prosecution, then that alone would be a good ground to grant anticipatory bail. Custodial interrogation can be one of the relevant aspects to be considered along with other grounds while deciding an application seeking anticipatory bail. There may be many cases in which the custodial interrogation of the accused may not be required, but that does not mean that the prima facie case against the accused should be ignored or overlooked and he should be granted anticipatory bail. The first and foremost thing that the court hearing an anticipatory bail application should consider is the prima facie case put up against the accused. Thereafter, the nature of the offence should be looked into along with the severity of the punishment. Custodial interrogation can be one of the grounds to decline custodial interrogation. However, even if custodial interrogation is not required or necessitated, by itself, cannot be a ground to grant anticipatory bail.”

9. Reverting to the case in hand, prima facie, allegations of commission of grave and heinous offence of illegally confining the complainant, subjecting her to repeated assault, and threatening her into conceding to their demands, have been leveled against the petitioner. The complainant, who was even found to be carrying a pregnancy of over 07 weeks at the time of her medical examination, has remained steadfast with respect to the allegations against the petitioner in her statement recorded under Section 183 BNSS.

bail, which is an extraordinary relief, cannot be granted on the mere asking of the petitioner. There must be an existence of exceptional circumstances in their favour so as to warrant the Court to extend this concession. Regrettably, there is nothing in the pleadings made on behalf of the petitioner, so as to make out the existence of any such exception, which would make her entitled for grant of concession of anticipatory bail.

11 Accordingly, in view of the totality of the facts and circumstances of the case, including the gravity of the alleged offences and the stage of the investigation, this Court is not inclined to grant the anticipatory bail to the petitioner.

12. Accordingly, the instant petition stands dismissed.

13. Needless to say that nothing observed hereinabove shall be construed as an expression on the merits of the case.

14. Pending miscellaneous application(s), if any, also stands disposed of.
